WOMAN JURORS BILL PASSES

DON'T ENDANGER U.S. NEUTRALITY, SENATE WARNED

Policy of New Deal Hit by Moore.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—Agitation for the abandonment of the traditional American neutrality policy was denounced before the senate foreign relations committee today. It was called an attempt to resuscitate the league of nations and to convert the United States into an autocracy, with the power of war and peace in the President's hands.

John Bassett Moore.

The activities of the internationalists and various administration proposals to join in concerted world policing endeavors were assailed by John Bassett Moore, noted authority on international law, in a letter to Senator Hiram Johnson [R., Cal.], who read it into the record.

No Official Recommendation.

The hearings on the pending proposals to amend the neutrality act then were terminated without a single official expression in the record as to the wishes of the Roosevelt administration in the matter of the neutrality act. This unprecedented procedure resulted from the unwillingness of Secretary of State Cordell Hull to testify publicly and the unwillingness of several committee members to hear him privately.

The senate nationalists wanted to put Mr. Hull on record as admitting that various proposals to amend the neutrality act would have unneutral effects, since they would put the resources of the United States at the disposal of the so-called democracies of Europe in a war between them and the totalitarian powers.

The agitation for the abandonment of the American neutrality policy, Mr. Moore wrote, is directly associated with efforts to invest the chief executive with the power of peace and war, which is vested in congress.

Discusses Effects of Neutrality.

"Prominently associated with this agitation," he said, "are certain groups which formerly sought to strengthen the league of nations by bringing the United States into it, and which would now endeavor to resuscitate it by placing our forces at the disposal of what is left of it.

"The philosophy of these groups, as it has been authoritatively expounded, appears to be that if by neutrality we mean abstention we must necessarily be unneutral because our abstention will necessarily favor one side more than the other or hurt one side more than the other.

"The deduction from this is that in order to be truly neutral we must intervene to such an extent and in such a way as to exempt ourselves from the charge that we have helped the one party to overcome the other.

"But this is only the beginning. While we all perhaps must be acrobatically neutral, we also have moral duties to perform, and these duties can be discharged only by helping to crush the 'aggressor.' This supposed duty rests upon the supposition that nations can combine to prevent national and international aggression just as a single law breaker can be arrested and punished in any organized community.

Flaws in Analogy.

"Unfortunately, however, this supposition leaves out of account the fact that the individual when arrested is entitled to a trial. The policeman who intervenes in an affray in the street is not authorized to determine which party is the aggressor and to kill him on the spot.

"But this difficulty is deftly surmounted by authorizing certain predesignated governments, which have associated themselves on the ground of superior virtue, to execute their inferiors without trial.

"As applied at the present time, this philosophy follows the line of cleavage between 'democracies' and 'autocracies,' and, as the United States is the chief, if not the sole, seat of the agitation, it is significant that its advocates here are those who wish to convert our democracy into an autocracy by conferring the power of peace and war on the President, which would at once make us an autocracy."

CAVARRETTA'S ANKLE BROKEN; OUT FIVE WEEKS

Phil Cavarretta, Cubs' first baseman-outfielder, suffered a fractured right ankle in a slide while stealing second base yesterday when the Cubs defeated the Giants in New York, 4 to 2. A section of the large ankle bone was chipped and it was necessary to wire it back in place in the Polyclinic hospital. Dr. C. R. Palmer, New York Giants' physician, estimated Cavarretta will be out of action for at least five weeks.

WINS IN HOUSE 100-15; HORNER SURE TO SIGN IT

Approval Ends Long Battle in State.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 9 [Tuesday].—[Special.]—After campaigning for many years for the right to serve on Illinois juries the women of this state won a victory early this morning when the house concurred with the senate and passed two bills removing their legal disability for this service. The vote was 100 to 15.

"Illinois women should celebrate now even more than they did when they won the right to vote," said Matilda Fenberg, Chicago attorney and campaign chairman for the Illinois Committee for Women on Juries.

"Passage of these bills means that we will have full citizenship the same as the women of New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, California, and other states where women have full rights.

Horner Expected to Sign It.

Gov. Henry Horner is expected to sign the bills without delay. He advocated passage of such a law in his message to the legislature in 1937.

All of the fifteen votes against the measure were cast by downstate legislators, some of whom claimed their local governments could not afford the expense of providing separate quarters for women jurors. Several Cook county representatives had opposed the bills earlier but joined with the majority on roll call.

The four women members of the house made speeches which, besides advancing the usual arguments, intimated that the bills would be passed eventually, so why not now? They are Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill [R., Downers Grove], Mrs. Bernice T. Van der Vries [R., Winnetka], Mrs. Maude N. Peffers [R., Aurora], and Miss Lizzie Barnes [D., Carmi].

"Women can vote and own property, hold office, be imprisoned for crimes, and they most certainly pay taxes," Mrs. Peffers said.

"The vote should be unanimous," Miss Barnes pleaded.

Passed Twice in Ten Years.

This was the second time in ten years that the legislature passed a women juries bill. The first law was passed in 1929, but two years later was held unconstitutional by the State Supreme court. The first law became effective after it was approved in a referendum in 1930. But the Supreme court held that the referendum clause made the law illegal.

Sponsors of the measure at this session fought to block any proposal for a referendum or any similar crippling amendments.

In the 1937 general session bills enabling women to serve on juries also were passed by the house, but they were defeated by 1 vote in the senate.

Mrs. Rena Elrod, chairman of the committee for women on juries, who introduced the bill in the house in 1929, was prevented by illness from seeing the bill passed this time.

Effective on July 1.

"I voted against women on juries previously, but now I'm going to vote for it," said Representative Frank Holten [D., East St. Louis].

The bills are to become effective July 1. Some opponents battled to extend the effective date to Jan. 1, 1940, when the bills were on second reading, contending that the other date would not allow enough time to provide women's quarters in courts.

Senator Harold G. Ward, Mayor Kelly's floor leader introduced the bills Jan. 30. Under his guidance they were passed by the senate March 7 with only a few votes to spare.

Introduced by Ward.

Only three words are inserted into the present jury law by the bills. These words are "of both sexes."

Although the law now on the books merely states that jurors shall be chosen from voters without specifying sex, the Illinois Supreme court held in 1925 that it meant men voters.

The court reasoned that this was intended by the legislature which enacted the law about a century ago because there were no women voters then.

Science Credits Cold Weather for Boy Babies

Science last night gave men an excuse to leave their wives at home and go to Florida every winter.

The popular belief that women are the frail sex received a setback in a report on the weather's effect upon men and women. The report was given by Dr. William F. Petersen at the annual meeting of the Chicago Pathological society.

Dr. Petersen, a professor of pathology in the University of Illinois college of medicine, produced a three year study of the relation of male and female deaths to the temperature to prove that each time the weather turns colder more males than females die in the population at large.

Nature Provides Insulation.

Dr. Petersen explained that nature, providing for the survival of the race, has made woman's life more stable by insulating her body with layers of fat.

Thus she doesn't feel the cold as does a man, whose rate of metabolism, or energy production, must be increased 10 per cent during a cold wave to give him the resistance naturally supplied to a woman. In other words, man's blood pressure goes up when the temperature does down.

In a comparison of the curves in daily temperature and the sex ratio of death, Dr. Petersen found that a sudden cold wave sometimes sent the ratio of daily deaths to six men to one woman.

A Swing to the Acid Side.

But nature has not left man out in the cold entirely. For, said Dr. Petersen, while cold weather kills more men it also produces more!

The reason, he said, is that cold causes woman's basal metabolism to swing to the acid side, increasing the probability of the birth of boy babies. Conversely, hot weather favors alkalinity and girl babies.

But nature once more takes a hand to maintain a biological balance. Women suffer more in hot weather and the ratio of their deaths then is higher, Dr. Petersen said.

JUSTICE LAUER QUITS BENCH; WIFE SERVING TERM AS SMUGGLER

Albany, N. Y., May 8.—[Special.]—Supreme Court Justice Edgar L. Lauer of New York City, whose wife is serving a three months' sentence for smuggling, resigned tonight in a letter to Gov. Herbert H. Lehman.

Judge Lauer's resignation came as the judiciary committees of the New York senate and assembly convened to consider possible impeachment or removal proceedings against him. The jurist's case was submitted to the judiciary committees by Gov. Lehman after United States Attorney John T. Cahill sent the governor a letter accusing Judge Lauer of knowledge of his wife's smuggling activities.

Judge Lauer, who is 68 years old, had only two more years to serve before reaching the constitutional age limit. In his letter to Lehman he protested his innocence, but said he realized that criticism of a judge necessarily impaired his usefulness.

FIND ARMS USED IN THERMOPYLAE BATTLE OF 480 B. C.

ATHENS, Greece, May 8.—(AP)—Archæologists today discovered spears, arrows, and other arms in classic Thermopylae pass. The discovery corroborates ancient history recording the great battle there in 480 B. C. in which the Spartan king, Leonidas, and 300 men died in a heroic defense against advancing armies of the Persian leader Xerxes. Yesterday French archæologists announced discovery of a rich treasure in gold, ivory, and bronze in excavations at Delphi.

Trans-Atlantic Plane Service Starts May 20

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.] — The 12th anniversary of Charles A. Lindbergh's flight from New York to Paris—May 20—is the date upon which Pan American Airways plans to commence regular passenger and mail flights to Europe, it was learned here today.

The company is ready. Two huge flying clippers and a trained crew of 211 pilots, engineers, navigators, meteorologists and mechanics are in Baltimore awaiting the signal to go. A third clipper ship is to be flown here in the next few days from the Boeing Seattle factory.

Await U. S. Approval.

Only governmental red tape remains to be cut. The company cannot start the airline until the Civil Aeronautics authority grants a certificate of convenience and necessity and determines the rate of pay to be received for carrying the mails between the two continents. Hearings on this certificate were completed last Tuesday and the authority's ruling is awaited.

The service planned by Pan American contemplates four weekly crossings the year round, regardless of weather. For three months the world's only complete ocean weather map has been drawn by their meteorologists every six hours and a daily flight plan prepared as if a crossing was being made.

Flights will start at Baltimore and stops will be made at New York. Newfoundland will be the jumping-off point for the ocean crossing in summer months. When ice locks this departure point, the planes will fly the southern route from New York to the Azores, to Lisbon, Portugal, and thence either to Marseilles, France or Southampton, England.

Trip to Require Day.

Depending upon the route flown, the crossing from New York to London or Paris will be made in from twenty to twenty-four hours.

The airplanes already have shown that they can make the flights in regular service. A shake-down cruise was completed last month.

The clippers weigh 82,500 pounds. Their wings span 152 feet and the hull is 109 feet long. They are powered by four twin row Cyclone radial engines, each developing 1,500 horse power for take-off. Their cruising range with 32 passengers is 4,000 miles, at a speed of about 135 miles an hour.

Wires Pet Tree to Shock Dogs; Nearly Killed

In the front yard of Charles Ellis at New Lenox, a village east of Joliet, stands an evergreen tree on which Ellis has long lavished care and attention. Neighborhood dogs did not realize how Ellis felt about his tree. To them it was just another post. And they often paused by the tree as they trotted past the Ellis yard.

Ellis determined last Sunday to make sure no more dogs would pick on his favorite tree. Using his knowledge as an electrician, Ellis, who is 45 years old, wired the tree.

Device Proves His Undoing.

He hooked up the wire to the electric light circuit in his house, intending to shock every dog that came within sniffing distance of the evergreen. But the first test indicated there was not enough current for this purpose.

Ellis attached a device to increase the charge. Then he picked up the wire to see how it worked and was knocked unconscious.

Frees Wire with Stick.

His little son, Charles Jr., 5, saw the accident and screamed. Mrs. Ellis ran out of the house. Seeing the live wire clutched in her husband's hand she picked up a stick and forced the wire free.

At this moment Mickey, a water spaniel owned by a neighbor, trotted over, touched the wire, and rolled over dead. Ellis was soon revived through the help of Bertrand Kohn, a youth living near by.

Ellis was confined to bed last night. His left arm was numb from the shock. He said about 1,000 volts had passed through his body. He attributed the accident to the use of an old transformer he had installed in his wire trap. It was of higher power than had been represented.

A HIGH SCHOOL FISH BECOMES COLLEGE COURSE

Thomas, Benjamin, and Arthur, the three gold fish, were frolicking in their bowl yesterday when Miss Esther Fledderjohn opened her English class at the Antioch Township High school. But in the midst of a discussion of dangling participles, Miss Fledderjohn noticed that Benjamin was missing. It was at that moment that one of the pupils, Daniel Palaski Jr., 17 years old, was stricken with a stomachache. He was given attention at the school infirmary. When he returned he was still wabbly.

"I'll tell you about Benjamin," he said. "I ate him. Like the college students have been doing, you know. But I'll tell you, Miss Fledderjohn, it takes a college education to eat gold fish. I feel so weak. I guess I'll have to go home now."

PLANE CRASH SETS FIRE TO 4 HOUSES; 18 BURN TO DEATH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, May 8.—At least eighteen persons were killed here today when a military airplane crashed in the center of the city, setting fire to four houses. Capt. Cristobal, pilot of the plane, and Galo Espinoza, an army official, were burned to death in the plane, and sixteen other persons perished in the blazing buildings.

Arrow indicates where crash occurred.

The flyers were en route from Quito to the airport here and had been executing maneuvers over downtown streets when the crash occurred. The plane's gasoline tanks exploded, showering flaming fuel over the four buildings, which burned down before the fire could be controled.

Authorities feared other bodies might be found in the ruins of the buildings. Some occupants of the structures saved themselves by dropping to the street from balconies. Among them was Dr. José Vicente Trujillo, who was a delegate to the recent Peru-Ecuador boundary conference in Washington, D. C.

KING OF BRITAIN O.K.'S APPEAL TO EUROPE'S CHIEFS

British Radio Chain Bans Broadcast.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 8.—The duke of Windsor, the former King Edward VIII of Great Britain, tonight appealed to all the political leaders of the world to rise above purely national interests and strive for peace.

"Peace is a matter far too vital for our happiness to be treated as a political question," the duke said, and declared, "In modern times the victory will lie only with the powers of evil." He expressed "profound conviction that there is no land whose people want war."

"The supreme importance of averting war will, I feel confident, impel all those in power to renew their endeavors to bring about a peaceful settlement," he said.

Hits Use of Propaganda.

"Among the measures that I feel might well be adopted to this end is the disparagement of all that harmful propaganda which, from whatever source it comes, tends to poison the minds of the people of the world.

"I personally deplore, for example, the use of such terms as 'encirclement and aggression.' They can only arouse just those dangerous passions that it should be the aim of us all to subdue."

The duke, seated in a room of a country inn near the center of the Verdun battlefield, made his appeal in a radio address which was broadcast to the United States.

[The duke's broadcast was a National Broadcasting company sustaining program, and as such the company said it shouldered all the costs.]

Fascists, Nazis Omit It.

In England the British Broadcasting corporation did not transmit the address, nor did the Canadian Broadcasting corporation. The speech was broadcast by French stations over short wave to Europe and South America. The National Broadcasting company offered the speech to every broadcasting company in Europe. As far as could be learned tonight, only the Germans, Italians, and British refused it.

The ban on the speech in Britain and Canada was regarded as a result of some British newspapers' criticisms that the duke's plan to speak was inopportune in view of the fact that his brother, King George VI., and Queen Elizabeth now are on the Atlantic on their way to America for a tour of Canada and the United States. English newspapers carried news reports of the address, however.

Before the duke spoke, a responsible source said he had exchanged radio communications with his brother. King George was understood to have given his personal sanction for the broadcast.

First Since Abdication.

This was the duke's first broadcast since his historic address of Dec. 11, 1936, when he announced his abdication of the British throne in order to marry Wallis Warfield of Baltimore.

"I am speaking tonight from Verdun where I have been spending a few days visiting one of the greatest battle fields of the last war," the duke said. "Upon this and other battlefields throughout the world millions of men suffered and died. As I talk to you from this historic spot I am deeply conscious of the presence of the great company of the dead, and I am convinced that could they make their voices heard they would be with me in what I am about to say.

Kept Out of Public Affairs.

"For two and one-half years I have deliberately kept out of public affairs and I still propose to do so. I speak for no one but myself, without the previous knowledge of any government. I speak simply as a soldier of the last war whose most earnest prayer it is that such cruel and destructive madness shall never again overtake mankind.

"I break my self-imposed silence now only because of the manifest danger that we may all be drawing nearer to a repetition of the grim events which happened a quarter of a century ago. The grave anxieties of the time in which we live compel me to raise my voice in expression of the universal longing to be delivered from the fears that beset us, and to return to normal conditions.

"You and I know that peace is a matter far too vital for our happiness to be treated as a political question. We also know that in modern warfare the victory will lie only with the powers of evil. Anarchy and chaos are the inevitable results with consequent misery for us all.

"I cannot claim for myself the expert knowledge of a statesman, but I have at least had the good fortune to travel the world and therefore to study human nature. These valuable experiences have left me with the profound conviction that there is no land whose people want war. This I believe to be as true of the German nation as of the British nation to which I belong, as it is of you in America and the French nation on whose friendly soil I now reside.

"International understanding does not always spring up spontaneously of itself. There are times when it has to be deliberately sought and negotiated, and political tension is apt to weaken that spirit of mutual concession in which conflicting claims can be best adjusted.

"The problems that concern us at the moment are only the reproductions on a larger scale of the jealousies and suspicions of everyday life. In our personal contacts we strive to live in harmony with our fellowmen. Otherwise modern civilization could never have come into existence. Are we now going to destroy that civilization by failing to do internationally what we have learned to do individually?

"In their public utterances the heads of all governments are at one in declaring that war would be disastrous to the well-being of their people. Whatever political disagreements may have arisen in the past the supreme importance of averting war will, I feel confident, impel all those in power to renew their endeavors to bring about a peaceful settlement.

Condemns Propaganda.

"Among the measures that I feel might well be adopted to this end is the disparagement of all that harmful propaganda which, from whatever source it comes, tends to poison the minds of the people of the world.

"I personally deplore, for example, the use of such terms as 'encirclement' and 'aggression.' They can only arouse just those dangerous passions that it should be the aim of us all to subdue.

"It is in a larger spirit than that of personal or purely national interests that peace should be pursued. The statesmen who set themselves to restore international security and confidence must act as good citizens of the world and not only as good Frenchmen, Italians, Germans, Americans, or Britons. The benefit to their own nation must be sought through the benefit of the wider community of which we are all members.

"In the name of those who fell in the last war I urge all political leaders to be resolute in the discharge of this mission. I appeal to them in the name of the living, whose existence and happiness are in their hands.

Effort to Save Humanity.

"And I appeal to them especially in the name of the youth of the present day with all its incalculable potentialities of future service to the human race. The world has not yet recovered from the effects of the last carnage which in each and every country decimated my generation. The greatest success that any government could achieve for its own national policy would be nothing in comparison with the triumph of having contributed to save humanity from the terrible fate which threatens it today.

"Somehow, I feel that my words tonight will find a sincere echo in the hearts of all who hear them. It is not for me to put forward concrete proposals; that must be left to those who have the power to guide their nations towards closer understanding. God grant that they may accomplish that great task before it is too late."

Visits Hitler

UNITY FREEMAN-MITFORD.

MUNICH, Germany, May 8.—(AP)—The Hon. Miss Unity Freeman-Mitford, British admirer of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, visited the Fuehrer at Obersalzberg over the week-end, it was learned today. The tall, blonde Englishwoman was said by friends, to have discussed the political situation with the fuehrer. It was recalled that she had met him several times during the Sudeten crisis last autumn.

Miss Freeman-Mitford, age 23, is a daughter of Baron Redesdale, British insurance magnate. An outspoken pro-Nazi, she has said she might become a German citizen. Her sister, the former Mrs. Diana Guinnes, is the wife of Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader.

TALK STIRS TEMPEST

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 8.—Something of a commotion boiled up in England today over the duke of Windsor's broadcast to America from France in favor of peace a few days before his brother, King George VI. of Great Britain, arrives in the new world for a state visit to Canada and the United States. Doubt was expressed lest this incident revive partisanship over the duke's abdication when it was thought this had smoldered out.

The British Broadcasting company, on the government's advice, decided not to rebroadcast the duke's speech in this country. The project at first had been considered. While many believed the duke's decision to broadcast at this time was tasteless and ill timed, others expressed the idea that the decision to suppress the broadcast here was equally so.

Despite the ban, the speech was widely heard over the radio both on short waves and from stations in France and the Netherlands. Queen Mother Mary and other members of the royal family were reported to have listened in.

Most of tomorrow's London newspapers, including the conservative Daily Telegraph, will publish the text of Windsor's speech. Only Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail takes up the issue editorially. It says the duke was exercising the right of every private citizen in deciding to broadcast and expresses the conviction that his speech long will have been forgotten in the United States before the king and queen arrive in Washington, D. C., June 8.

Earlier in the day some papers printed the duke's reply to criticism that the broadcast was inappropriate at the time of the royal tour. The reply was:

"When the duke accepted the invitation to talk he did so realizing that some criticism would be likely. He was sincerely convinced, however, that a personal, nonpolitical opinion might be of some value just now and he feels that with the uncertainty of the situation there was no time to lose in giving one."

FRENCH SAY DUKE REVIVES POLICY OF APPEASEMENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 8.—The duke of Windsor's peace broadcast from Verdun was given additional significance by the fact that the French radio system, which is controled by the government, broadcast both the English and French versions of the speech over a nation-wide network tonight. It led observers here to link up the address with the current efforts behind the diplomatic scene to patch up the peace of Europe once again.

Windsor's appeal was held here to fall into line with the attitude of appeasement which the British government has publicly abandoned. The broadcast of his words therefore was taken as one among several indications that, despite the official attitude of London, powerful influences in France still are behind the campaign for some form of understanding with Italy, if not with the entire totalitarian bloc.

THICK FOG SLOWS BRITISH RULERS' ATLANTIC VOYAGE

ABOARD THE EMPRESS OF AUSTRALIA, May 8.—(AP)—Thick fog which at times blotted accompanying warships from view today slowed the voyage of King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain to Canada and the United States.

The heavy mist borne by southwest winds forced the Empress of Australia and the cruisers Glasgow, Southampton, and Repulse into single file fog formation with this liner leading the procession. Whistles and sirens of the four ships sounded at frequent intervals to warn other shipping out of the way.

Despite the gloomy weather the seas were less turbulent than yesterday and the royal couple appeared to be enjoying the trip. Smiling and apparently carefree they strolled the deck.

GERMAN PAPERS PRINT EXTRACTS OF DUKE'S SPEECH

BERLIN, May 8.—(AP)—The official German news agency, D. N. B., issued a résumé of about 200 words on the duke of Windsor's address at Verdun tonight, pointing out that his speech was directed in general to the American people and emphasizing that he criticized conceptions like encirclement and aggression. There was no official or semi-official comment.

POPE INVITES FIVE POWERS TO TALK PEACE IN VATICAN

Polish-German Dispute Settlement Is Sought.

BY JULES SAUERWEIN.
[Foreign editor of the Paris-Soir.]
[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, May 8.—Pope Pius XII. has proposed, it is learned here, that a meeting be held in Vatican City of the prime ministers and foreign ministers of Germany, Great Britain, France, Italy, and Poland.

This proposal, it is understood, was submitted by papal nuncios at Berchtesgaden [Hitler's retreat] and Paris and was communicated to the governments of the other invited powers.

The pope's suggestion is that the meeting take place as soon as possible. He would open the first session in person and would put his palace and staff at the disposal of the diplomats. He would take no part personally in the discussions, but would be at the disposal of the conference through his secretary of state as counselor and conciliator if needed.

Report Italy Favorable.

The aim of the conference would be to settle amicably the German-Polish dispute and eventually to begin the settlement of other problems.

It appears that the Italian government is favorable. It cannot on its own initiative suggest a new Munich on Italian soil after the failure of the dictators to live up to that agreement. At the same time it is understood Italy does not want war for many reasons, principally because of the profound division that exists in Italian public opinion.

While in appearance the Italian government is closely tied to Germany by admission of the principle of a military alliance, that alliance has also the advantage, it is pointed out, that it will be to some extent possible for Italy to control Germany's actions. It is stipulated that there must be an exchange of opinions before any action is taken.

Fascists Have Own Claims.

But that is viewed as not enough. Italy, it is reported, would like to see in the settlement of the Polish problem a means of developing her own claims. To have a conference in Vatican City, which is within the city of Rome, would provide such an opportunity, it is held. In Fascist circles Pope Pius XII. enjoys great respect and popularity among the mass of the people of Italy.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler is reported to have received the papal nuncio with the greatest respect. Some observers think he may find it convenient at this moment to draw nearer the Holy See, whose hostility is characterized as a disadvantage to him in his internal policy.

It is believed, although nothing definite is known, that this meeting would not be unwelcome to him. It might permit reconciliation with the premiers of Britain and France, while it offers him a prospect of obtaining something more substantial from Poland.

Poland Sees a Pitfall.

London does not appear to be opposed to the suggestion.

Paris has as yet taken no decision. The cabinet seems somewhat divided on the question.

Poland's attitude is naturally reserved, for, despite the veneration that is felt for the pope, the fact is pointed out that a meeting in such a place and under such conditions must inevitably lead to concession on her part.

CHICAGO PARKS GIVE UP FIGHT FOR BOND ISSUE

Springfield, Ill., May 8.—[Special.]—The Chicago park district tonight abandoned its bill for a $6,000,000 bond issue without a referendum. Representative Joseph L. Rategan [D. Chicago] asked that the bill be tabled.

The district, Rategan explained, will now concentrate its efforts on passage of its pegged levy bills for $10,500,000 for 1939 and $11,000,000 each for 1940 and 1941. When the park legislation was heard in committee, an agreement was made that should be the bond issue be approved, each of the pegged levy figures would be reduced by $2,000,000.

Rategan said he was dropping the bond issue because of a movement to attach a referendum to it which would require publication 30 days before the election. And since the referendum would have to come on June 5, less than 30 days remain.

31 YEARS OF DISTINGUISHED PUBLIC SERVICE

Dear Friends:

It is 31 years since Terminal Barber Shops came into existence and began setting new—and ever higher—standards of barbering. You have seen us make many significant changes. You were most impressed and pleased with our efforts to offer hygienic service. Every instrument we use is hospital clean. Tonics are full strength and medically approved before we adopt them. Sunray lamps had to be carefully tested and receive the sanction of health authorities here before we offered their benefits to you.

Conscientious attention to these principles of operation and scores of details of service have retained the patronage of some customers as long as thirty-one years. You may recall that we publicly denounced hair singeing as a fake and abolished it from our shops because we found it to be detrimental to the hair. This saved the public hundreds of thousands of dollars a year. We banished the "high-pressure" barber and now you get only what you ask for. No effort is made to sell you extras.

My purpose at this time is to assure you on this, our 31st anniversary of public service, that I personally, my associates and staff, pledge ourselves to a continuance of the high standards of service that have earned us the friendship and patronage of thousands throughout the country and established the excellent reputation the Terminal Barber Shops enjoy.

SLATTERY TELLS DAUGHTER'S DEAL IN UTILITY STOCK

Quiz Is Invited by Former Commerce Chief.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—James M. Slattery, recently inducted United States senator from Illinois, willingly discussed today a transaction in stock of the Commonwealth-Edison company of Chicago which may be involved in an investigation being made by State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney of Cook county.

James M. Slattery.

A story printed in Chicago yesterday reported that one phase of the inquiry would concern the purchase of $25,000 worth of the stock of a utility company by an official who at that time was in a position to aid or injure the company by his decisions.

As a preliminary to his acceptance of appointment to the James Hamilton Lewis vacancy by Gov. Horner, Slattery resigned from the chairmanship of the Illinois commerce commission, the state rate making and regulatory board with jurisdiction over public utilities.

Willing to Tell His Deal.

Suspecting that the story of the Courtney investigation, in which no names were used, might refer to a transaction in which he was concerned, Slattery said promptly today that if the reference was to him there were decided errors in fact involved. The senator also said he was entirely willing to tell about a stock purchase similar to the one mentioned in the story of the Courtney inquiry.

He said that one of his daughters, Mrs. Norbert J. Johnson, 2045 West Birchwood avenue, Chicago, purchased $25,000 worth of Commonwealth Edison stock last August and sold it a few weeks later. He told of the use of currency in the transaction and said that he gave Mrs. Johnson the $25,000 as a part of a settlement he made upon his sons and daughters by a first marriage after the death of their mother. There were ten children by that marriage.

Senator Slattery denied emphatically that the $25,000 or any part of it or any other money came to him from the Commonwealth Edison company or any other utility corporation. He invited the most thorough investigation of that subject.

Horner Told About Quiz.

The senator said he was not at all worried by reports of the Courtney investigation, that he had heard them about the time of his appointment and that he gave the information to Gov. Horner.

"Was that before or after your appointment?" Slattery was asked.

"It was either a day or two before or a day or two after," the senator replied. "I told the governor that there is not a scintilla of truth in any insinuations that I ever received a penny from any utility. He was satisfied from what I told him that the rumors are a gross fabrication trumped up to blacken my character.

"If I received $25,000 or any other sum from the Commonwealth Edison company you would think that somebody would be able to put his finger on some quid pro quo the company received from me or from the commerce commission while I was its chairman, wouldn't you? Well, I challenge any one to show any favor to this or any other utility received at my hands.

"The fact is that during the three years I served as chairman of the commission the rates of the Commonwealth Edison company and the Public Service corporation were cut to the extent of 6 million dollars a year to consumers. The rates of the Illinois Bell Telephone company in Illinois were cut 3 million dollars.

"The Peoples Gas sought a 15 per cent increase, involving an additional payment by consumers of 3 million dollars a year. The commission disallowed the increase and was enjoined by the company. The excess revenue is being impounded pending decision by the Illinois Supreme court and if the decision is favorable to the commission the money will be returned to consumers.

"At the time my daughter bought the Commonwealth Edison stock in August, 1938, there was nothing affecting the Commonwealth Edison company or allied corporations pending before the commission. Their rates had been reduced by the commission prior thereto and their rates were reduced again afterward—early this year. They received no increases in rates or any other concessions for which it is now insinuated they paid me.

"Nothing to Conceal."

"I have nothing to conceal and all I ask is that Mr. Courtney or any others interested shall go to the bottom of these reports, rumors, and insinuations. Let them comb the commission records, the utility records, and my books. They will find nothing dishonorable, nothing lending the slightest color of truth to the insinuations."

Asked where his daughter obtained the $25,000 and how she came to invest in Commonwealth Edison stock, Senator Slattery said:

"I made a settlement on my children after the death of their mother. As her share my daughter received $25,000. I gave her the money in currency and she took it to the brokers, Mitchell, Hutchins and company, and bought the Commonwealth Edison stock."

"Why did you give the money to your daughter in currency?" the senator was asked.

"Why, I happened to have that much money in my box and it was the simplest way to do it," the senator replied.

Advised to Buy Stock.

"How did your daughter come to invest in Commonwealth Edison stock?"

"She wanted to invest the money I gave her," said the senator, "and she asked the advice of several persons before she decided to buy Commonwealth Edison. Her decision was finally the result of a family council."

"Did you advise her to buy Commonwealth Edison?" the senator was asked.

"I didn't suggest it," he replied, "but when my daughter asked my advice I told her that it was a sound stock and a good investment."

"Did Chick Evans [Charles Evans Jr., former champion golfer] advise your daughter to buy Commonwealth Edison?"

"Well, he may have," said Senator Slattery. "Chick Evans, you understand, is an old friend of the family."

Evans was a customers' man in the brokerage firm of Mitchell, Hutchins & Co., through which the senator's daughter bought the Commonwealth Edison stock. It was through this firm likewise that she later sold the stock. While she held the stock it paid 6 per cent on the investment.

Asked why she sold such an investment, Senator Slattery said he thought that the stock had gone up a couple of points and that she wanted to make a profit. He denied heatedly that his daughter had received the proceeds of the sale of the stock from the brokers in currency, but it presently developed that it was from the bank where she cashed the broker's check that she received the currency.

"The report that my daughter received currency from the broker when she sold her stock is a 100 per cent lie," said the senator. "If any one wants the proof I will have Mitchell, Hutchins & Co. show their records and canceled checks. That will show that the brokers gave her a check for the stock she sold."

"Did she insist on being paid in currency when she cashed the check?" the senator was asked.

"Yes," he replied, "she did. She cashed the check at the Continental bank and she received the money in currency and put it in a safety deposit box."

Eggs in Several Baskets.

"Why did she insist on currency?"

"Why, she wanted to divide it up and put it in different places, just as you or I or anybody would do," said the senator, indicating that it was because of the $5,000 limitation of federal deposit insurance that his daughter wanted to distribute the money to a number of savings accounts.

"But ordinarily such a distribution would be made by check, wouldn't it?"

"Yes, if you have a checking account," said the senator. "But my daughter had no checking account."

The senator denied that Walter Cummings, chairman of the bank, or any other officer of the bank had sought to dissuade his daughter from insistence upon payment of the check in currency, fearing it would not be safe for her to carry more than $25,000 on her person in the streets.

"No truth at all in that," said the senator.

Further questioning of the senator revealed that the safety deposit box in which Mrs. Johnson put the proceeds of her stock transaction amounting to more than $25,000 was the senator's box from which he took the $25,000 in currency to give his daughter.

"It was the family box," the senator explained.

The senator thought it not unusual to have $25,000 or more in currency in one's safety deposit box at any time—on the contrary, quite the usual thing.

BROKER RECALLS PURCHASE.

Charles C. Renshaw of Mitchell, Hutchins & Co., the stock broker mentioned by Senator Slattery in Washington yesterday in connection with a purchase of $25,000 worth of Commonwealth Edison stock, said last night that he recalled the transaction clearly because of discussion of it along La Salle street in recent weeks.

He said the business was brought into the office by Charles [Chick] Evans Jr., as Senator Slattery said. His recollection was that there were two purchases made last August, a purchase of 500 shares in each instance. The 1,000 shares were sold a few weeks later.

At the time the purchase was made, he continued, it attracted no attention as it was not a large deal and it was some time later when the relationship between the customer whose name was on the books, Mrs. Norbert J. Johnson, and Chairman Slattery of the commerce commission became known.

The firm's attention was attracted particularly, Renshaw said, when State's Attorney Courtney's office sent an auditor to look into the transaction. About the same time, he said, rumors of an investigation into Slattery's affairs were heard in La Salle street. He said his firm welcomed official inquiry into any or all of its records at any time if it is considered necessary.

4 MAYORS PAINT DISMAL PICTURE OF RELIEF NEED

Little Gain in Six Years of New Deal.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—A dismal picture of the unemployment situation in the great industrial centers of the United States after more than six years of the New Deal was painted for a house investigating committee today by the mayors of New York, Chicago, Cleveland, and Boston.

Mayor M. J. Tobin.

Fiorello La Guardia is a member of the American Labor party which is strong in New York City with the assistance of the communist party. Edward J. Kelly of Chicago and Maurice J. Tobin of Boston are Democrats, and Harold H. Burton of Cleveland is a Republican.

The testimony of these four officials of varying political affiliations was practically identical. They told the committee, which is investigating the Works Progress administration, that a curtailment of WPA activities would be disastrous, although they admitted that certain abuses had crept into the work-relief agency.

Summary of Situation.

A brief summary of the situation in each of the four cities was given by the mayors as follows:

NEW YORK—Total unemployment of 750,000, only slightly fewer than the number at the unemployment peak in 1933. Unemployment has been increasing since Jan. 1. At least nine years more of trouble over the unemployment situation are to be expected.

CHICAGO—A total of 650,000 persons receiving some form of relief with trend on upward slant. Curtailment of federal assistance would have disastrous consequences. Attempt by local government to raise taxes to increase city's share of relief would lead to tax strikes.

CLEVELAND—Total unemployment 150,000, an increase of more than 100 per cent since April, 1937, and only 25 per cent below the unemployment peak in 1933. Business just holding its own at present, and no immediate recovery seen ahead.

BOSTON.—Employment only 58 per cent of 1925-'27 level and wages at 49 per cent of same level. Eighty-seven thousand on relief. City can raise no more money for its relief share because government has seized every possible tax resource.

"If there were any curtailment in the government relief program I don't know what would happen," Mayor Kelly told the committee. "WPA should be enhanced and increased rather than curbed. The WPA has not been perfect, but it is far superior to a relief program under local supervision. There are some abuses in the agency, but they are not beyond correction."

As did the other mayors, Kelly said it was impossible for the cities to raise more money because of constitutional debt limitations.

"Where's Uncle Sam going to come out if we keep putting more of the population on the federal pay roll?" Chairman Edward T. Taylor [D., Colo.] asked Kelly.

"It's the job of you gentlemen to knock down the barriers to business confidence," Kelly replied. "Fifty per cent of our depression is mental as a result of a general propaganda that times are going to continue to be tough."

EXPECT IMPROVEMENT IN RELATIONS BETWEEN POLAND AND RUSSIA

WARSAW, May 8.—(AP)—An improvement in relations with soviet Russia was advanced today as Poland's possible answer to the new Rome-Berlin military alliance.

Indications in this direction were seen through the announcement of the appointment of a new Russian ambassador to Poland and the fact that soviet Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs Vladimir Potemkin would arrive here tomorrow night. The new ambassador will be Nicholas Sharanow, now minister to Greece. He will succeed Jacob Davtian, who failed to return to his post from a sudden and unexplained trip to Moscow eighteen months ago. Poland, meanwhile, took a calm and almost detached view of today's discussions in the British house of commons on a possible third party mediation of the German-Polish dispute over Danzig.

$45,000 IS RAISED BY TAG DAY FOR ADULT CHARITIES

Chicagoans opened their purses generously in yesterday's annual tag day drive by the Chicago Federation of Aged and Adult Charities. A preliminary count last night indicated donations of approximately $45,000. Taggers stood on 4,000 street corners throughout the day. Donations ranged from a cent to substantial sums. Five colored youths made an involuntary gift of $5. They fled from a dice game and police picked up the change and gave it to the nearest tagger. Thirty-eight charity institutions will benefit from the tag day.

ENGLAND OFFERS TO HELP SETTLE POLISH-NAZI ROW

Ready to Lend Services as Mediator if Asked.

LONDON, May 8.—(AP)—Great Britain today offered, if invited, to mediate in the Polish-German dispute over Danzig and urged soviet Russia to join the British-French security front.

Prime Minister Chamberlain intimated to the house of commons that Britain would be ready to lend her good office in establishing some form of international machinery to arbitrate the Danzig question should Germany and Poland ask her to do so.

He declared Britain would welcome an amicable settlement of the Danzig problem.

Some quarters drew the conclusion that Britain might be reverting to the appeasement policy, but most diplomats were inclined to reject this interpretation.

Perils Poland's Value as Ally.

"Any attempt to appease Germany in Danzig," one informed source said, "automatically would reduce Poland's value as a British ally."

Foreign office officials said the British reply to Russia's proposal of a British-French-Russian military alliance, delivered in Moscow today, asked Russia to:

1. Declare the soviet government's willingness to resist any act of aggression involving any country in eastern Europe [meaning mainly Poland, Rumania and Turkey] in any way in which she was asked to help by the eastern European countries involved.

2. Accept a British-French pledge that if such a declaration were made it would not come into effect until the British and French armies were actually in the field of battle.

3. Accept the British plan instead of the soviet plan because it is faster, it gets around Rumanian and Polish objections to being tied directly to Russia, and it would operate in practice almost like the triple alliance which Russia proposed.

Foreign office officials explained that under the British proposals Russia's western frontier would be guaranteed by France and Britain because it would be impossible to attack Russia from the west without first marching through Poland or Rumania—an act which would bring France and Britain into war immediately.

Russia Considers Its Reply.

MOSCOW, May 8.—(AP)—Sir William Seeds, the British ambassador, communicated his nation's counter proposals to soviet Russia's far-reaching security plan today in a brief call on Vyacheslav Molotov, soviet premier and foreign commissar. Presumably he was told the soviet government would carefully consider its reply.

HOUSE APPROVES GRANT TO NAVY OF 773 MILLIONS

Washington, D. C., May 8.—(AP)—The house passed and sent to the senate today a record peacetime naval appropriation bill of $773,414,241. The measure is $17,015,212 under budget estimates, but $145,817,047 over the current appropriation. The house included in the bill at the last minute a $2,941,000 fund for air bases on three mid-Pacific islands—Midway, Palmyra, and Johnston—which its appropriations committee rejected last week.

All of the increase over the current appropriation resulted from expansion of the fleet and the naval air force. The bill carried $254,204,712 for ship construction and armament and $83,658,400 for the navy's bureau of aeronautics. The construction fund will be used on 121 vessels already approved and on 23 others, including two 45,000 ton battleships for which the house appropriated $1,500,000. The aviation total includes $51,847,000 for 500 new planes.

2,000 IN CENTRAL WEST GO TO SEEK JOBS IN GERMANY

Consul Tells Exodus of Last 2 Years.

Two thousand persons of German descent have emigrated from the central west to Germany in the last two years to take jobs in Nazi industries, Dr. E. L. Baer, German consul general in Chicago, said yesterday.

"My office has been swamped with requests from German-Americans, naturalized Germans, and even non-Germanic Americans for information about employment in Germany," said Baer.

Has No Recruiting Agency.

"I am not an agent for recruiting American workers for Germany, and I know of none. But if persons come to me I will advise them and make inquiries in Germany to learn if they can obtain jobs and homes there.

"Most of them pay their own passage. Some receive advances from the German firms which have hired them, but not through this office."

Baer placed the number who have gone from the United States to Germany to find employment since 1936 at about 5,000. The 2,000 figure was for the seven states served by his consulate.

Go on Visitors' Visas.

Most of the German-Americans settling in Germany go there on visitors' visas, and decide to take up residence after learning of job openings from relatives or from the German labor front, said Baer. This type outnumbers those who obtain immigration visas before going, he said.

Baer attributed the movement to American unemployment and a labor shortage in Germany.

JAPS RENEW AIR RAIDS; DROP 50 BOMBS ON ICHANG

SHANGHAI, May 8.—(AP)—The Japanese renewed air raids on Ichang today, twelve planes dropping fifty bombs on the important Yangtze river city midway between Hankow, the old Chinese provisional capital, and Chungking, the present one.

HITLER AND DUCE READY TO DICKER WITH OPPONENTS

Problems Must Be Settled at Once, Italy Warns.

ROME, May 8.—(AP)—The Fascist press hinted today that Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini now were prepared to negotiate Europe's so-called open problems.

Virginio Gayda, authoritative editor of Il Giornale d'Italia and often a spokesman for the foreign office, indicated the readiness of the Rome-Berlin axis to negotiate was a result of the projected pact of Milan.

The new German-Italian military and political alliance was pictured by Gayda as a counterbalance to the British-French front. Gayda hinted that after achieving a balance by the weight of their combined military, economic and political resources, Germany and Italy now were ready to negotiate.

Demands Problems Settled.

How many of Europe's many issues were considered open problems were not enumerated by Gayda, but he did suggest that they included those of Danzig and Pomorze [the Polish corridor] between Germany and Poland, and Italy's territorial claims against France.

The editor warned that the peaceableness of the axis policy at this time must not be taken as a sign Europe's open problems could be shelved, but that on the contrary they should be settled without delay if future trouble were to be averted.

Foreign diplomats joined the Fascist press in interpreting the Milan pact in its immediate aspect as a friendly brake on German aspirations in Eastern Europe, and thus they saw tension diminished over Danzig.

Diplomats speculated on the possibility of the alliance being extended to include a military tie up with Japan. No official reaction has yet appeared to Japanese suggestions in that direction.

Many doubted that Italy and Germany desired to make military commitments so far away from home. These persons thought that if the axis partners sign up with Japan the accord would be much looser than a union merely between Berlin and Rome.

Italy's army chieftains met tonight with Mussolini to discuss military matters in the light of the agreement with Germany to sign a formal military and political pact. They considered steps recently taken to speed up the organization of frontier forces and otherwise to increase the army's efficiency.

BRITISH, FRENCH MILITARY TALKS BEGIN IN PARIS

PARIS, May 8.—(AP)—Technical army staff talks were opened between Britain and France today. The conferences were understood to be designed to coördinate movement of a British expeditionary force to France in the event of war.

The arrival in Paris last night of two warplane loads of high ranking British army officers was the first public indication that such a conference was planned.

NAZIS' CHIEF RED BAITER EASES UP ON REDS, CHURCH

Rosenberg Shifts Hate to America.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 8.—Alfred Rosenberg, a native of Russia and now Germany's chief anti-communistic prophet, spoke for an hour and a half today on the Nazi creed, the wickedness of American capitalists and democracies without attacking communism or even mentioning it.

His silence on communism illustrated how eager the Nazis are to come to terms with soviet Russia. He also dealt rather leniently with the Roman Catholic church which he usually besmirches, as he is the Nazi chieftain responsible for the Nazi "weltanschauung" [world outlook].

He had to tone down on the Catholic church because the Nazis are trying to induce the Vatican to organize a big peace movement. The Nazis hope this peace crusade can be used to induce Polish Catholics to oppose armed resistance to Germany's eastern expansion plans.

Attacks U. S. Capitalists.

America fared less well than Russia. The archpriest of Nazidom said that "the liberty of the former pioneers had been turned into capitalistic robberhood." This "robberhood," he said, involves not only Jewish but non-Jewish capitalists.

"Those who today in America speak of the necessity of world civilization display the same unscrupulous spirit that swept America in 1917 when America entered the world war," he said.

Rosenberg's speech was broadcast all over Germany and evidently was designed to convince the Nazis that the United States now fails to sympathize with the Nazi cause. Rosenberg shouted assurances that Naziism does not aim at world supremacy.

Claiming that the United States once had ten million unemployed persons and that this figure had risen to eleven million, Rosenberg said: "America's failure to solve the unemployment problem shows that democracy is at the end of her rope."

In foreign office quarters England meanwhile was viewed with more friendliness. Many officials are convinced that Prime Minister Chamberlain and his cabinet soon will turn to Germany and help her obtain what she wants in Poland.

"Nobody on the Thames will want to risk a war just for the sake of Danzig and the small territory adjoining it," they said, referring to German demands for the return of the free city on the Baltic to the reich and for a right of way across the Polish corridor to East Prussia.

The Nazis, however, sneered at British suggestions that the London government is ready to act as arbitrator in the German-Polish dispute.

Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop again is of the opinion that Germany need not wait for what the Nazis refer to as the further disintegration of Poland. He prefers to take action against Poland now.

"England and France will not do more for Poland than they did for Czecho-Slovakia," his friends insist.

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering advocates patience. He believes Germany can get what she wants without risking a war. As matters stand at present Goering's view has been accepted by Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Land of the Barons

(Story in Adjoining Column.)

Map locates three post war republics created from former Russian territory. Large estates, most of them owned by German barons, were expropriated by the new governments.

GERMANS RECALL OLD CLAIMS TO BALTIC ESTATES

Latvia and Estonia Once Fiefs of Barons.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HELSINGFORS, Finland, May 8.—Germany's ambitions for expansion in the Baltic regions are causing considerable jitteriness in Latvia, Estonia, and Lithuania. Two of these nations, Latvia and Estonia, barely 20 years old, were once scarcely more than feudal holdings of German barons.

The countries were parts of czarist ruled Russia, but the real bosses were Germans. When the three nations came into being as the result of postwar treaties one of the first steps of the new governments was to expropriate large estates and redistribute them among the peasants.

Demand Compensation.

Most of the so-called Baltic barons, who had been Russian subjects for years, went to Germany and became German citizens. Then they induced the German government to make demands for compensation for the expropriation of their lands. In most cases the governments refused to recognize the claims and the subject still is a source of friction.

The area of Latvia is about 25,000 square miles. Twenty-eight per cent of the land is arable, 30 per cent forest, and 27 per cent permanent meadow and pasture. Forty-eight per cent of all the land was owned by a few great families, the Baltic barons, descendants of those Teutonic knights who carried Christianity into the pagan lands of the Baltic and remained as land owners.

One man, Baron Osten Sachen, owned the whole province of Courland, which is larger than the whole of Switzerland. In the province of Livonia 132 families owned 7,000,000 acres and the peasants owned only about 30 per cent of the cultivated land.

Allowed to Keep Mansions.

Seventy-five per cent of the Latvian population was composed of landless families, agricultural laborers, small farmers, and lessees. The Latvian government in expropriating the large estates allowed the owners to keep their family houses and 150 to 300 acres of land.

Now all but a small proportion of this land has been divided among the new owners. Farms run in size from 80 to 100 acres and the new owners were allowed 35 years in which to pay the government for their holdings.

One of the expropriated estates was that of Baron Wolf, who had 5,000 acres and employed about twenty-five permanent workers. Wolf was allowed to keep his mansion and 300 acres and the rest of the estate was cut up into twenty-five farms, each operated by a family of five or more persons.

Own People Not Spared.

Latvia established 80,000 families on expropriated lands, creating nearly 55,000 new farms. A total of 4,250,000 acres was distributed. The Latvians, in confiscating the large estates, did not spare their own people. Fifty-one such estates were nationalized.

About 100 men owned a quarter of the land of Estonia. Half the area of Estonia was taken up by large landed properties of about 5,000 acres each. Estonia passed its agrarian reform laws in 1919, expropriated these estates and parcelled them out among the peasants. The former owners were allowed one-tenth of the prewar value of the land. The redistribution resulted in the creation of 30,000 new farms.

Polish Nobles Affected.

The great landlords of Lithuania were noble Polish and Russian families, with a few native nobles. They lived on kindlier relations with their peasants than did the Baltic barons.

Lithuania expropriated large estates, but agreed to make full payment to the owners at the prices ruling in 1910 and allowed the owners to retain much larger central estates than did Latvia and Estonia. Before the war about 2,000,000 acres belonged to great landowners, but now only 3 per cent of the land is in estates of over 125 acres.

JANITOR GETS 2 99 YEAR TERMS IN FIRE KILLING 9

Less than ten hours after William Warren, colored, had been sentenced to long prison terms for setting a fire that caused eight deaths his ninth victim died last night. She was Mrs. Mitzie McKay. All nine victims were colored.

Warren, 21 years old, pleaded guilty during the day to two charges of murder. Judge William J. Lindsay sentenced him to two consecutive terms of ninety-nine years each. The death penalty was demanded by the state, but Judge Lindsay held that Warren was suffering from dementia praecox and therefore the case did not warant death.

On April 11 Warren started a fire in a large apartment house occupied by colored families at 2963 Michigan avenue, where he was janitor. It spread rapidly, trapping many tenants. Warren started the fire for revenge against his employer.

Suspect in Police Killing to Get Lie Detector Test

Alphonse Grajewski, 21 years old, who is being held by police for questioning in connection with the murder of Policeman John A. Olson last October, is to be put through a lie detector test today, police announced last night. Grajewski was arrested in front of his home at 514 North Hermitage avenue several nights ago by Policemen Joseph Ponicki and Edward Kennedy.

GEN. PERSHING IN CITY ON WAY TO WASHINGTON

Looking as fit as he said he feels, Gen. John J. Pershing paused in Chicago yesterday on his way to Washington, D. C. With him on his trip from Tucson, Ariz., where he fought a battle with death in a sanitarium a year ago, was his physician, Dr. Roland Davison.

Gen. Pershing.

"It's business in Washington," the general said. "Europe? If I go there again it's in the far distant future. Yes, I feel as well as I look—and that's pretty darned good."

Now 79 years old, Pershing walked with a firm step. His hair is white, but his laugh is hearty. Dr. Davison said the general takes a twenty minute walk daily and works on his autobiography. Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes and Mrs. Dawes visited with the wartime commander of the American army in France in his special car on the Rock Island "Californian" before it was switched to the Manhattan limited of the Pennsylvania lines.

Decisions by Fisher Set Legal Precedents.

[This is the fifth of a series of stories on candidates in the Cook county judicial election of June 5. Careers of sitting judges will be reviewed first.]

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

In his campus days at the University of Chicago, Hugo M. Friend ranked first on the track team, and first is his standing today among the Circuit judges in the opinion of lawyers. He and seven other Republican judges are candidates for reëlection on the Democratic ticket with thirteen judges of that party. He has been assigned to the Illinois Appellate court since 1930.

Judge Friend is 56 years old. He was born in Prague [now part of the German empire] and was brought to this country at the age of 2. He was graduated from the University of Chicago in 1905 and received his law degree there three years later. During his undergraduate career he competed in track and field, specializing in the running broad jump.

Sets Broad Jump Record.

In 1905, his last year of competition, he was captain of the track team and established the western conference broad jump record of 23 feet 4¾ inches. The record stood for ten years. He was a member of the United States Olympic team in 1906 and finished third in the international broad jump.

Judge Friend was a master in chancery from 1916 to 1920, and in the latter year was appointed to the Circuit court by Gov. Frank O. Lowden to fill the unexpired term of Judge Merritt W. Pinckney, deceased.

He was elected in 1921 in the coalition ticket which defeated the slate put up by a former Republican mayor, and was reëlected on coalition tickets in 1927 and 1933.

Many Celebrated Trials.

Before his appointment to the Appellate bench in 1930, Judge Friend presided at many celebrated trials, including the hearing of conspiracy charges against members of the White Sox as a result of the 1919 world series baseball scandal.

Results of a recent bar association questionnaire on the qualifications of judges seeking reëlection found Judge Friend leading the list with a percentage of 97.92 on the grading for diligence, integrity, and ability. He was placed first on the lawyers' vote for renomination of judges, with 1,784 ballots cast for him and only 66 against him. The association committee on candidates paid its highest tribute to him and Judge David Matchett, saying the two were exceptionally well qualified for office.

Judge Friend lives at 4850 Kimbark avenue. He is married and is the father of two sons and two daughters.

Intricate Problems Delight Fisher.

Judge Harry M. Fisher, Democrat, is reputed to have one of the keenest legal minds on the bench. But the bar association has deplored his tendency in past years to engage in partisan politics. Recently he announced his withdrawal from such activities, yet in the bar primary last March he ranked fifth from the bottom of the list among the twenty-one judges who are seeking reëlection on the Democratic ticket.

Judge Fisher delights in dealing in intricate problems of civil law, and some of his decisions in chancery cases have established precedent not only in Illinois but also in other states. He also has been responsible for important changes in criminal law, among them those which allowed the waiver of a jury trial in a felony case and which took from a jury the right to be a judge of the law as well as the facts.

Defeats City Hall Slate.

Judge Fisher is 57 years old. He was born in Lithuania and came to America in 1893, when he was 12. He was graduated from the Chicago College of Law and was admitted to the bar in 1904. He was elected to the Municipal court in 1912, was reëlected in 1918, and was elevated to the Circuit court in 1921, being one of the candidates on the coalition ticket which defeated the slate selected by a former Republican mayor. He was reëlected in the 1927 and 1933 coalitions.

Judge Fisher presided over the sanitary district graft trial. Other cases which brought publicity to him were the dog race track trials, in which he issued injunctions to prevent raids.

He has been prominent in Jewish affairs and is a leader in the Chicago Zionist organization.

Refused Indorsement in 1933.

In 1933 the bar association refused him its indorsement, but this year the board of managers advocate his renomination, praising his legal ability and stating that his withdrawal from politics should enhance his capacity for sound judicial service.

Members of the association, however, rated him low in the ranking on integrity, ability, and diligence, giving him a percentage of 61.79, eighteenth place among the judges seeking reëlection. The vote for his renomination, placing him fifth from the bottom, was 916 for him and 897 against.

Judge Fisher lives at 3740 Lake Shore drive. He is married and the father of three children.

A bandit who beat a woman and robbed her of $30 on the 55th street platform of the Illinois Central railroad early yesterday was sought last night. His victim is Mrs. Myrtle Forsman, 30 years old, 5510 Cornell avenue.

COALITION JUDGES CALLED SELFISH BY REPUBLICANS

Charge Dictatorship in Rule of Courts.

Nominees on the Republican ticket for the Cook county judicial election June 5 charged yesterday that the candidates on the Democratic ticket were actuated by selfish motives in joining what they thought would be a coalition movement.

Following a conference in their La Salle hotel headquarters, the Republicans answered a statement issued by the Democratic candidates last Saturday. In particular they pointed out this Democratic utterance:

"Under our law and conditions that exist in this metropolitan community, it is almost impossible for judges affiliated with the minority party to survive an election where another party is in power."

Say What This Means.

"In plain language," read the Republican reply," this means the Democrats think:

"1. That the important thing in the coming judicial election is for individual sitting judges to save their jobs, or as euphoniously expressed, 'survive an election.'

"2. That the people of Chicago and Cook county cannot be trusted to elect their judges.

"Their argument is that, although the Democratic so-called coalition ticket is a dictatorship ticket, the dictatorship is a benevolent one, its sole purpose being to save the people from the consequences of their ignorance and folly.

"The Republican nominees believe that there are no benevolent dictatorships and that all dictatorships mean the destruction of human rights and liberties.

"We believe coalition is circumvention of the law, breeding arrogance in the judges and disregard of the people's rights.

Destroy Court Independence.

"We condemn coalition dictatorship not only because it is in violation of the law, but because its inevitable result is to destroy the independence of the judiciary, which means destruction of the confidence of the people in their courts."

Similar attacks on the Democratic ticket, which includes sixteen Democrats and ten Republicans nominated by the Democratic county convention, were made at three Republican ward meetings. Among the speakers at 3d and 4th ward meetings were Rupert F. Bippus, Arnold R. Baar, and Joseph Z. Willner.

Thirteen candidates spoke at a meeting in the 33d ward at 2748 Diversey boulevard.

"The cause for which we fight," said Albert E. Jenner Jr., "is the cause of fair and impartial justice administration without fear or favor. Coalition picking is court packing."

Douglas Fairbanks Sr. Pays $103,730 on Tax Judgment

Los Angeles, May 8.—(AP)—Douglas Fairbanks Sr., former motion picture star, paid $103,730.65 today in settlement of federal income taxes disputed for more than ten years. The government won a judgment of $72,186.94, with interest dating back to early 1932, against Fairbanks for erroneous refunds on the actor's tax payments over a three year period beginning in 1927. The Supreme court recently affrmed the award.

Nobody Home

IF YOU'RE LOOKING for a fourth for bridge, or company to the movies—don't call up that friend who bought a Nash.

His house is dark. The door is locked. Something has happened to him!

He's been shanghaied—by a car that refuses to stay in a garage.

And that's the way it happens. So quickly that often you don't have time to grab your coat.

There's your new Nash—long and rakish, gay and glittering, so restless it can hardly stay at the curb.

Next thing you know, you're out of town with your heart singing with excitement.

There's a new kind of engine up in front that acts like a thoroughbred stinging under a spur. There's a wheel in your hands, and gears* beneath your fingers, that are almost as quick as thought. And before you catch your breath, a *Fourth Speed cuts in . . . and the fun begins all over again.

For, suddenly, you haven't an engine. You don't hear it or catch the slightest tremor in the floorboard. But the telephone poles begin ticking by, in a new and furious tempo.

Then begins that phantom-flight that ever afterwards makes any other car seem tame.

For hills and valleys flash by like scenes in a beautiful dream. The bumps are gone. The ruts are smoothed away.

There isn't even any dust or draft to spoil your experience. A magical little "Weather Eye"* that filters the air automatically takes care of that—makes coat and gloves unnecessary in a Nash the year 'round.

And if wanderlust gets the better of you—if you can't get that proud hood headed home—well, just park beneath a star and go to bed.

For it's that simple with a Nash: With its convertible bed, you can live in it—anywhere—for weeks on end.

Too bad you're missing all the fun that Nash owners have . . .

If it's money that's holding you back—forget it! For here's the simple, certified truth: Nash has ten beautiful models priced next to the lowest . . . models that hold the Gilmore-Yosemite economy record in their class, with 21.25 miles to the gallon.

And, as everybody knows, you can't make a Nash quit!

So—what's holding you back? Come down and try it!

It's that new NASH

PEDESTRIAN HIT AND KILLED BY SAFETY EXPERT

Victim Walking on Wrong Side of Road.

Harry Walls, 43 years old, a caretaker at the Indian Head Golf club, was struck and killed last night by a car driven by Raymond R. Eisner, a safety expert. The accident occurred between Wolf road and Willow Springs in Lyons township.

Eisner said Walls was walking in the rain on the wrong side of route 66 and was carrying an empty half gallon beer bottle. Eisner, who lives at 1514 Orchard street, is well known to school children and civic groups. He is a past secretary of the north area council of the Chicago Motor club.

Hurt in Fall from Car.

Jerry Healy, 4 years old, son of Lieut. Daniel Healy of the Hudson avenue station, was injured seriously yesterday when he tumbled from an automobile in Harlem avenue near Jackson boulevard, Oak Park. He suffered a skull fracture and was taken to the Oak Park hospital. The boy and his parents were on a demonstration ride in a new car driven by Thomas Stewart, 537 South Oak Park avenue, Oak Park, a salesman, when the accident occurred. Police said the youngster accidentally opened a door and fell out. The Healys live at 5415 Jackson boulevard.

Nathaniel Smith, 3, colored, 1522 13th street, was fatally injured when he ran against the side of a moving truck in front of his home. Arnold Rogge, 49, 2849 North Rockwell street, the driver, took the boy to county hospital, where he died.

Edward Hurd, 65, of 7318 Harvard avenue, died in St. George hospital of injuries incurred April 28 when he was struck in front of 7353 Vincennes avenue by the automobile of Norman Glockman, 6417 Kenwood avenue. Hurd was a retired letter carrier.

Janitor Dies of Injuries.

Dennis Sullivan, 45, 6312 South Oakley avenue, a janitor, died in the Holy Cross hospital of injuries incurred Sunday when he was struck by an automobile at Oakley avenue and 63d street. The driver was Herbert Stiefel, 6132 Vernon avenue.

Michael Lasich, 53, of 222 West 33d street, was killed in an automobile collision on Route 14, four miles southeast of Woodstock. Alfred Haach, 6701 North Campbell avenue, driver of the car in which Lasich was riding, and two passengers, were injured.

Up to 4 p. m. yesterday 308 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 239 were killed in Chicago, where 6,735 were injured in the same period.

500 BOYS TO GET SAFETY PATROL AWARDS IN CITY

More than 500 members of school safety patrols in Illinois and Indiana will meet in Chicago Thursday to receive awards from the Chicago Motor club, which organized the patrol in 1922.

The boys were selected in ninety-six counties for the best records in efficiency, promptness, devotion to duty, and interest in safety activities. After the presentation of awards here 100 of them will be sent on a four day trip to Washington, D. C., to attend the eighth annual patrol conference as guests of the motor club.

Awards will be made at a banquet in the Knickerbocker hotel at noon Thursday. Chicago civic, business, and education leaders will pay tribute to the organization, which is credited with saving 20,000 children from death and injury in Chicago alone. Among the speakers will be Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club; Robert H. Cabell, president of Armour & Co., and Lynn Waldorf, Northwestern university football coach.

WILD MOTORIST IS HELD TO JURY IN AUTO DEATH

Raymond Madaus, 23 years old, 4742 Monroe street, was held to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter yesterday by a coroner's jury. The action was taken at an inquest into the death of Charles Kaleta, 27, of 3104 Walnut street. Madaus ran down and killed Kaleta on a wild ride early Friday in a borrowed automobile after a tour of taverns. He also injured a woman pedestrian and struck two other cars and an elevated pillar before motorists captured him.

DIES AFTER LEG IS REMOVED.

Vincennes, Ind., May 8.—[Special.]—Mary Elizabeth Wade, 65 years old, died here last night, following the recent amputation of a leg. The leg had been injured in a fall ten years ago.

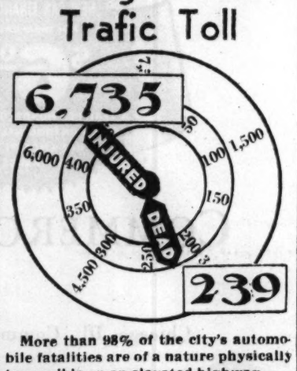
Arrests Continue

Chief James Kerr of the park police announced last night that a new automobile safety testing lane would be opened at 7 a. m. today in Calumet park, 98th street and the lake. This lane, Chief Kerr said, is designed to take some of the load off the one at 70th street and Cottage Grove avenue.

A total of 17,841 motorists have been arrested or given summonses in Chicago since the drive for safety lane stickers and city, state, and drivers' licenses began May 1.

In the 48 hours ending at 4 p. m. yesterday, city police arrested forty-nine motorists for failure to have drivers' licenses. Summonses were given eighty-two lacking a state license, 546 without city tags, and 425 without safety stickers. Park police found six without a driver's license, twenty-three needing 1939 state licenses, thirty-three without city tags, and eighteen without safety stickers.

THE MASSACRE Chicago's 1939 Trafic Toll



More than 98% of the city's automobile fatalities are of a nature physically impossible on an elevated highway.

HEALTH BOARD MOVING TO OLD COURT BUILDING

The board of health yesterday began moving from the city hall to new quarters in the old Criminal courts building, 54 West Hubbard street. It will occupy six of the seven floors in the building.

Paul Gerhard Jr., city architect, said moving will be completed in a week. There will be no interruption in service. The huge record files, many of them dating back to the Chicago fire of 1871, will be taken to the Hubbard street building under guard.

VISITING DOCTOR GETS 20 DAYS AS A WILD DRIVER

Dr. Lee R. Ireland, 32 years old, a physician of St. Francisville, Lawrence county, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Thomas A. Green in Safety court to twenty days in the county jail for reckless driving. His driving license was suspended for six months.

Policeman Arthur Heidman testified Dr. Ireland disregarded a trafic light at Walton street and Michigan avenue Sunday night. Dr. Ireland said he did not see the light and also denied the policeman's statement that he had been drinking.

MILK DRIVERS SPURN PROPOSAL FOR WAGE CUTS

BY HAL FOUST.

Chicago's milk wagon drivers, at a union meeting last night, unanimously rejected a proposed wage cut which, if accepted, had been expected to bring a reduction in retail milk prices. Approximately 3,000 drivers, assembled in Carmen's hall, Van Buren street and Ashland boulevard, turned against the advice of their leaders to agree to the decrease.

Leslie G. Goudie, president of the Teamsters' Joint council, presented a proposal from the employers and argued in support of it. It was that the basic weekly wage be decreased from $48 to $40 and that there be a proportionate reduction in the rate on drivers' commissions, which now average about $4 a week.

The proposition was approximately the same as that accepted last July by unions in the Calumet district. The decrease there was followed immediately by a retail price cut of 2 cents a quart. Theodore G. Montague, president of the Borden company, in testifying before a monopoly committee in Washington, D. C., referred to "excessive wage costs" in Chicago and said they blocked a lower retail price.

Robert G. Fitchie, president of the Chicago Milk Wagon Drivers' union, told the union meeting 500 men had been laid off since last September and that 500 more were about to be laid off because of a decline in doorstep deliveries in Chicago and the suburbs. The number of drivers has declined from 7,200 to 4,800 since 1929, he said.

Dr. Rawleigh W. Stone, University of Chicago economist, who has been representing milk dealers in negotiations since Jan. 1, said he hoped the rank and file of the union will reconsider.

FALLS TO DEATH TRYING TO MOVE A THERMOMETER

Weather was the hobby of Herbert D. Ford, 80 years old, a resident at the Hyde Park hotel, 1511 Hyde Park boulevard. He kept thermometers in his sixth floor room and outside his window. Last night he climbed on the sill in what police believe was an effort to change thermometers. He lost his balance and fell. He was found dead on the fire escape landing at the second floor. Letters found in Ford's room indicated he was a physician. Police are trying to reach relatives in Minneapolis, Minn., and Kansas City, Mo.

FAME'S FAVORITE SON

By CALEB

THE present year is a double anniversary in literary annals. It is the three hundred and seventy-fifth that has passed since a boy baby's name was inscribed on the parish rolls of the little town of Stratford, in Warwickshire—and the sixtieth that has elapsed since the first Memorial Theater to his name was opened in that same now-immortal spot.

On a recent April Saturday, in line with a prescribed tradition of many years' standing, celebration of both events was picturesquely observed. At the stroke of noon, the flags of some sixty nations, hung along the four Stratford streets that converge on Bridge Street square, were unfurled. The strains of the British national anthem broke on the air, and through the town wended an orderly procession of visiting notables, tourists and villagers, to place flowers on the tomb of Shakespeare.

After a brief service, luncheon was served in the hall next to the theater; and the afternoon was devoted to informal sightseeing. In the evening the birthday celebrants again gathered in Stratford's massive red brick Memorial Theater, to see a presentation of "Much Ado About Nothing."

Such, annually, are the ceremonies with which an unforgetting world remembers its most illustrious English poet and dramatist. Nearly three and a quarter centuries have vanished since the "Bard of Avon" was laid to rest near the altar of his church. A half-length memorial figure of him occupies a nearby wall, and unique among tributes from abroad is the American window commemorating one of his most popular passages, The Seven Ages of Man. In the unstaying march of time, hundreds of thousands of sightseers have paused beside this Warwickshire shrine, prompted by veneration for civilization's greatest man of letters.

A tribute still more significant is that registered in the world's bookshops. Among those emporia of Literature, those metering-stations of international readership, Shakespeare is still the outstanding steady seller of the ages! In our own third floor section, the creator of "Hamlet" draws patrons for every type of edition from the utilitarian to the de luxe. Never, in short, has the name of Shakespeare been shadowed by "To be or not to be." Time and Fame already had the answer, on the day in 1586 that he went up to London town!

BUILDER OF SLOT MACHINES TELLS OF BIG INDUSTRY

Says Gaming War Perils 10,000 Jobs in State.

President Fred Mills of the Mills Novelty company, one of the largest manufacturers of slot machines in the country, outlined his views on making slot machines yesterday.

Meanwhile Special Prosecutor Charles E. Jack of Lake county was directing the wrecking of 58 slot machines and 38 pinball devices in a Waukegan junk yard. Judge Ralph J. Dady of the Circuit court approved Jack's final report that in ten months of crusading he had confiscated the machines, driven slot machine gambling from the county, and banished Leo Mongoven, one of the reputed heads of the slot machine ring there. Coins found in the slot machines and $2,772 in fines cut the net cost of the campaign to $7,716—$4,784 less than the board of supervisors appropriated for the task.

John E. Cassidy, attorney general of Illinois, was reasserting simultaneously that slot machine gambling must be driven from the state.

Has 2,000 Employés.

Mills' manufacturing plant at 4100 Fullerton avenue occupies ten acres. He said its 2,000 employés draw $3,000,000 a year in pay.

Mills said that slot machines represent about 15 per cent of his company's annual business of $9,000,000 to $10,000,000. Coin operated vending machines and equipment for refrigeration and air conditioning are among the company's other products.

Mills pointed out that his company makes but does not operate the slot machines. He admitted that the company sells its machines to any one who wants a slot machine, and that Edward Vogel, named by police as the slot machine manager for the old Capone syndicate in Cook county, is one of his customers.

Admits Racketeer Influence.

Mills said the company takes no part in currying favor of politicans. Originally, he said, the company sold its slot machines to business men who organized groups to buy and place the machines. Mills admitted that during prohibition the racketeers seized control of the buying and operating of the machines in many states.

Mills said that operation of slot machines is legal in some states and is some foreign countries. Machines are even licensed in some localities. The company sells many machines in England and France. Until Germany banned the Chicago made machines many were sold there.

Mills contended that 10,000 persons would be thrown out of work in Illinois if the laws against slot machine gambling were enforced.

Throughout the fifty years of his company's existence, Mills said, the slot machine business has been regarded as on the verge of extermination, but it keeps on going.

Stock Held by Family.

Fred Mills became president of the company in 1915 and immediately began branching out in the manufacture of other mechanical devices to guard against the time when slot machines would be outlawed.

The company's stock is family owned, although a few employés have been permitted to acquire some of it. There is no trading in the stock. Four sons and four daughters of the founder are the principal stockholders.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 8.—[Special.]—Robert Harold Ickes, foster son of the secretary of the interior, and his bride, the former Marcelle Levine of Chicago, returned here today after their surprise elopement Saturday night to Lisbon, O. Young Ickes, 25 years old, returned to his job as a clerk at a utility company. The couple are living at a small Pittsburgh hotel for the present.

U. OF I. JUNIOR IS CAPTAIN OF PERSHING RIFLES

George R. Avery, 58 West 109th street, a junior in the college of engineering at the University of Illinois, has been named captain of the Pershing Rifles company. The Rifles were founded in 1892 by Gen. John J. Pershing, then a lieutenant in command of student training at the University of Nebraska. His purpose was to foster the spirit for military education among students in the beginning courses of military training. The Illinois company was established in 1931.

EVIDENCE TAKEN IN PLEA TO VOID KIDNAP SENTENCE

Depositions were taken in Chicago yesterday in an effort to free Cassius McDonald, a Detroit engineer, who was convicted of conspiracy in the Bremer kidnaping case in 1934 and sent to a federal prison for fifteen years. He was tried in St. Paul, Minn. His wife, Edith G. McDonald, has been traveling over the United States since then gathering evidence, affidavits, and depositions in an effort to show that McDonald did not receive a proper trial. Mrs. McDonald and her attorney, Thomas E. Kluczynski, appeared yesterday before John Looby, assistant federal district attorney. She testified that her husband's attorney, Everett Jennings, was incompetent during the trial.

FREE SUICIDE ATTEMPT GIRL.

A charge of disorderly conduct against Miss Dagmar Blair, 25 years old, vaudeville dancer, was dismissed yesterday when she told Judge Oscar S. Caplan loneliness had driven her to a suicide attempt. She was rescued from the lake Sunday near Navy pier.

JOHN E. MACK TAKES CHARGE OF EX-JUDGE MANTON BRIBERY CASE

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—Former Supreme Court Justice John E. Mack, noted trial lawyer and a lifelong friend of President Roosevelt, today took charge of the defense of Martin T. Manton, former federal circuit court judge, who is under indictment on charges of taking bribes and conspiracy.

Mack takes the place of Martin Conboy, former United States attorney and also a close friend of the President, as defense attorney.

In his first legal move for the defense Mack today filed demurrers against four of the five indictments against Manton. He also filed motions to quash all five. The demurrers will be argued Wednesday before Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut of Maryland.

"SHOULD I BUY MY NEW CAR ON THE MONTHLY PAYMENT PLAN?"

YES—provided you have an absolute guarantee of your finance company against any hidden charges in rate, and a guarantee that you will receive exactly the insurance for which you pay.

Commercial Credit Company openly publishes its rate and makes these guarantees. The dealers who give you Commercial Credit service co-operate in extending these guarantees to you. If you buy on the Commercial Credit plan, you get every protection to which you are entitled. Accept nothing less.

Why spend the money you have saved? Buy your new car out of your monthly income just as you pay your rent. Pay for your new car while you use it. You will be surprised at the little difference between the cash price plus cost of insurance, and the time payment price.

Our Rate is Guaranteed—We Hide No Charges

When we handle the financing of your time payment transaction on your new car of any make, we guarantee that the finance charge you will pay does not exceed $6.00 per year per $100 (50c per month) on your original unpaid balance plus charge for the insurance you receive, payable in 12 to 18 or more equal monthly instalments. Some states require a small charge for filing, recording or tax, which is added. No hidden charge for "investigation" or anything else.

Complete Insurance Protection

You receive a policy or certificate issued by one of the largest insurance companies protecting you against loss by fire—actual value; theft—broad form; collision—deductible type; and other accidental physical damage to your new car. We guarantee that you will get exactly the insurance you pay for and will not pay any more for such insurance than the regular published rates charged by the same insurance company for the territory in which you live.

Ask Any Dealer For This Guaranteed Plan

Your local dealer can handle the entire transaction for you with the least trouble, at one place, one time. This guaranteed monthly payment plan is available through acceptable dealers anywhere in the United States through 192 local offices that extend Commercial Credit service. You will find the employes at these local offices efficient, courteous and helpful. They are just as much a part of your community as your local druggist or grocer.

Buy your new car from the local dealer who gives you Commercial Credit service. You will then benefit by our guarantee.

TAVERN HOLDUP SLAYER SHOWN BY BULLET TEST

Robbers Tell of Chance Leading to Murder.

The bullets that killed Alex Ferguson, an undertaker, and gravely wounded two policemen a week ago in an attempted tavern holdup were identified last night as having been fired from the revolver held by Orville Watson, one of the two men who have confessed the shooting. The identification was made by Joseph C. Willimovsky Jr., ballistics expert with the coroner's office.

Watson and his companion, Edward Riley, both ex-convicts, in complete statements yesterday, admitted to Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan and First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley that they had recently held up two drug stores and a tire repair shop on the north side and a loop drug store. They also have confessed about 30 robberies in Detroit, Mich., where they were captured last Wednesday. A gas station attendant was wounded in one of the Detroit robberies.

Plan for Holdup Changed.

They also told Sullivan and Crowley that they had planned to rob a different tavern, about a block and a half from the one at 4623 North Western avenue where the shooting occurred. They changed their minds, however, when they found a uniformed patrolman in the place.

Murder indictments are expected to be sought on Thursday before the grand jury.

Susanna Smith, 22 years old, Watson's sweetheart, probably will be charged with being an accessory after the fact, Chief Sullivan said. She had been living with Watson since she met him in a Detroit tavern in January. She said last night that she was willing to tell the truth at the trial "no matter what happens to me."

Told to Come Home.

Miss Smith said her father and mother had told her to come home if she's freed. The whole thing has taught her at least one lesson. She added:

"I'm sorry I got mixed up with the wrong crowd. In the future I'll look into people's background before I take up with them."

A STREAMLINED JOE SALTIS ASKS SUPPORT BY WIFE

Joe Saltis, prohibition beer baron, appeared before Judge Robert C. O'Connell yesterday with his clothes ballooning about him. He said he had spent two weeks in Holy Cross hospital recovering from a reducing diet that cut his weight from 297 to 205 pounds.

Saltis asked support money and attorney's fees from his estranged wife, Anna, who is suing for divorce, and who wants him to pay support money to her. Saltis through Attorney John H. Rogers, said he is destitute and that his wife had possession of his life savings of $70,000.

Rogers said Mrs. Saltis' assertion that her husband was about to sell their $110,000 home at 9857 Bell avenue was inaccurate as the home is held in joint tenancy. Judge O'Connell gave Saltis permission to enter the home from which he has been barred by injunction. Then the court referred the case to Charles J. Mueller, special commissioner, to determine who possesses the assets.

TORRIO ARRIVES AT PRISON FOR 2½ YEAR STAY

Leavenworth, Kas., May 8.—(AP)—John Torrio, former Chicago underworld leader and Al Capone associate, was brought to federal penitentiary today to begin his two and a half year term for income tax evasion.

Prison officials said Torrio, brought under guard of United States marshals, was placed in the customary thirty day quarantine. At the termination of that period he will be assigned his number and prison duties.

OPPOSES SENDING EASILY LED BOYS TO ST. CHARLES

The situation at the unwalled St. Charles School for Boys, from which thirty-nine inmates escaped since Jan. 1, was discussed yesterday at the eighth annual conference on delinquency prevention. A three day meeting, one of the chief events of crime prevention week in Illinois, opened at the Waukegan hotel in Waukegan.

Lieut. Harry Costello.

"No boy who is easily led should ever be be sent to St. Charles," said Lieut. Harry M. Costello of the Chicago police department's crime prevention bureau. "Boys of this type come out of the school tough and vicious criminals."

St. Charles will be up for discussion later in the conference, said William A. Lewis, retiring president of the Big Brothers and Sisters Association of Illinois, which is sponsoring the conference along with the state department of public welfare.

"We have advocated for years," said Lewis, "that St. Charles be used for its original purpose—a home for dependent boys—and that young criminals be sent elsewhere."

HINT INSURANCE MURDER RING RAN MARRIAGE MART

Philadelphia, Pa., May 8.—(AP)—A possibility insurance-murder racketeers may have operated a matrimonial agency for widows drew the attention of detectives tonight.

An investigator working on the ever-widening ramifications of the Philadelphia scheme that brought death to scores of insurance policy holders said gang leaders had presented a list of "prospects" to at least one widow shortly after her husband was poisoned. The detective said there were indications the murder syndicate then planned to insure and kill the next husband. Nine of eleven women now in custody are widows. The ninth was married a second time.

The eleventh widow was arrested today. She is Mrs. Millie Giacobbe, held on a charge of killing her husband in 1933. The alertness of a woman police stenographer today prevented her from shooting herself after her arrest. She had also taken poison, but not enough to kill.

FASHION'S REFRESHING DICTATE FOR SUMMER

Fashion makes an inspired "steal" from a summer salad-bowl and translates the same cool, delicious greens into important shades for daytime and evening wear. The deep, dark green of watercress, the pale translucent green of Iceberg lettuce, yellow-green of endive. Refreshing as the clear streams of spring water that nourish the pungent watercress. Doubly effective when worn with sharp white accessories.

Romantic exhibition and a selling of

ARTWARES FROM JAVA AND BALI

From the romantic lands of Java and Bali comes this extraordinary collection of exotic batiks and wood carvings, both antique and modern. Objects you've read about—perhaps have never seen. The "sarong," which is wrapped about the body; the "slendang," a shawl-like strip worn around shoulders; the "kemban," a girdle; the "sarong kapala," worn on the head. Mr. Milan Rupert, who collected them, will be glad to tell you about the exhibit.

LAG ON BUILDINGS AT N. Y. FAIR RUNS WAGES SKY HIGH

Workers Reap Harvest as Exhibitors Wail.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—The New York World's Fair is a bonanza for electrical workers and a headache for exhibitors.

With numerous structures still uncompleted, the electricians are reaping a golden harvest on overtime, night work, and labor on Saturdays and Sundays. Some of the men are averaging between $300 and $400 a week income, a canvass of the buildings disclosed today.

Directors of the various state buildings have the saddest tales to tell although the foreign exhibitors and honkeytonk operators in the amusement section are not far behind in joining the chorus of complaints.

Five State Buildings Ready.

When the exposition opened a week ago only five state buildings out of twenty-seven were ready for the public. The rest of the state participation projects were in several stages of construction, hysteria, and profanity. They aren't much better off today.

Some of the states permitted the fair to put up the buildings for them. The fair saved money by eliminating windows in its buildings. This lack of windows makes it necessary to use considerable electric lighting.

The state directors fighting out the battle here at the fair site contend the electricians are stringing out the jobs so that they can get more overtime. The men receive $2 an hour for a six hour day and double pay for overtime.

Illinois was one of the handful of states which opened its exhibit at the start. Francis Powers, director of the exhibit, said this good fortune was due to early contracting with a responsible electrical contractor.

Rackets Being Investigated.

No exhibitor can have an electrical worker unless he first goes to an electrical contractor. The men are mostly members of local No. 3, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, an American Federation of Labor affiliate.

Rackets in the electrical industry in New York county have been under investigation by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey for the last two years, but the prosecutor's jurisdiction does not extend to the site of the exposition in the Borough of Queens. Dewey has twelve electrical contractors under indictment for rigging contracts.

The contractors and the union officers have a working agreement which results in a complete monopoly of the electrical business.

TIGER A TERROR UNTIL HE HEARS MASTER'S VOICE

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—A full grown tiger, with a full set of teeth and a deep bass voice, roamed at large and terrified Long Island City residents for an hour today. Twenty policemen and thirty circus employés captured the beast.

Police received a telephone call from a truck driver. "Listen," he said, "I'm not drunk. I just saw three men chasing a tiger."

Radio patrols were notified. Emergency squads sped to Northern boulevard. When police arrived there were thirty men instead of three. Roy Chorister, the tiger's trainer, arrived. He was terribly put out and told the tiger so. Then the cowed animal was loaded into a truck and hauled back to the circus.

BABY GIRL WINS HEARTS IN COURT AND HELPS DADDY

Eileen Stoskos, 1½ years old, was the cynosure of all eyes yesterday in the Felony court, but not because of her father, Clarence, 26, of 4538 South Wood street. Stoskos was charged with a $20 robbery.

Police testified he had been drinking, and had no record. Judge Matthew D. Hartigan then placed him under supervision for ninety days. At that moment Jack Condy, 10 month old son of Mrs. Sarah Condy, 10403 South Ewing avenue, a spectator, burst into tears.

Rushing from her father's side, little Eileen began consoling the baby. Soon the baby's wails ceased. Then Eileen trotted back to her father and, smiling at the courtroom, walked out hand in hand with them.

2 St. Charles Graduates Ordered Held as Robbers

Ray Graff, 21 years old, 4208 South Rockwell street, and Bruno Skirfone, 20, of 4640 South California avenue, yesterday were held to the grand jury by Judge Jay A. Schiller of the Automobile court on charges of robbery and auto theft. Both are former inmates of the St. Charles School for Boys.

BEG YOUR PARDON

It was incorrectly stated yesterday that burglars had broken into the home of Harold Florsheim, shoe manufacturer, on Sanders road, southwest of Lake Forest. The home was that of Alf Mitchell, superintendent for the Florsheim farm and kennels. Mr. Florsheim does not maintain a residence there.

Wake Up That Lazy Scalp

GIVE YOUR HAIR A CHANCE TO GROW

YOUR Scalp becomes lazy and unable to continue its normal hair-growing function when any of the 14 local scalp ills, responsible for most cases of baldness, attacks your hair-growing structure. These 14 disorders cause the hair to fall abnormally, or to become too dry or too oily. They cause dandruff, scalp itch, and lead to baldness unless checked.

Save your hair and prevent baldness by turning your scalp problem over to a Thomas expert today. He'll carefully examine your scalp and will determine the exact causes of your hair-loss. He will then direct the reliable, proved Thomas treatment to overcome those causes. Your scalp itch will stop, dandruff will disappear. The dormant, lazy sources of hair growth will be gently stimulated so that hair can grow again on the thin and bald spots.

The Thomas' have helped more than a quarter-million persons to retain or regain hair during the past twenty years. They can help you, too. No charge is ever made in a Thomas office for a complete scalp examination.

FARMERS VOTED 338 MILLIONS IN GIFTS BY SENATE

Parity and Crop Surplus Funds Increased.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—Without a dissenting voice, the senate today adopted committee amendments adding 225 million dollars for farm parity payments and 113 million dollars for surplus removal subsidies to the pending agriculture department appropriation bill. The senate appropriations committee already had added a total of 381 million dollars to the bill as passed by the house, raising the total to 1 billion 216 million dollars.

With various floor amendments remaining to be considered the senate is expected to pass the measure tomorrow.

Morgenthau Opposes Measure.

Just before the senate acted, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau expressed his opposition to the 381 million dollar unbudgeted increase. He said he had no idea what the deficit for the fiscal year 1940 would be. The budget estimate is 3 billion 300 million dollars, and Morgenthau said he thought 3 billion would be plenty.

Morgenthau also expressed the forlorn hope that congress would provide some means for raising additional revenues to pay for the increased farm subsidies.

No effort was made in the senate to obtain a record vote on the 338 million dollar increase for farm parity and surplus removal subsidies. Economy advocates, whether prompted by a sense of futility or political expediency, let the huge spending items go in by unanimous consent. House economy advocates put up a valiant fight to defeat the parity and surplus removal items, but the word has passed around that the house conferees will accept the senate amendments with alacrity.

Add to Half Million Subsidy.

The 225 million dollars for parity payments will supplement 500 million dollars for so-called soil conservation subsidies. Parity is defined as a price that will give the farmer a relative purchasing power equal to the 1909-'14 base level. Under the senate bill subsidies will be paid from the 225 million dollar fund only in case the market price of corn, cotton, wheat, tobacco and rice has not reached 75 per cent of the parity price.

The 113 million dollars for surplus removal subsidies was added to the funds available under section 32 of the agricultural adjustment act, which sets aside 30 per cent of the customs receipts for that purpose. With an estimated 90 million dollars from customs receipts, there will be a total of 203 million dollars to subsidize both the export and the domestic consumption [by reliefers] of agricultural commodities.

Senator Scott W. Lucas [D., Ill.], leader of the midwestern farm bloc, told the senate that the surplus removal subsidies would be used as follows:

1. Domestic consumption: $50,000,000 for dairy products, $18,000,000 for meats, primarily hogs; $6,000,000 for poultry and eggs, and $35,000,000 for fruits and vegetables.

2. For export subsidies: $50,000,000 for cotton, $26,000,000 for wheat, $16,000,000 for lard, $2,000,000 for pecans and walnuts.

Senator Lucas said he fully realized that the senate was dealing with an enormous appropriation.

"The question is frequently asked upon the floor of the senate and in the lobbies, 'where are we going with all of these appropriations? When are we to stop, if ever?'" he said. "I am frank to say that I have not the answer."

May Suggest Taxes.

Senator Lucas said it would be easy to say to the farmers, "here is the money. Just come and get it. Don't worry about a thing." But his approach, he said, was different.

"I must remind the farmers of America that this money is being appropriated in their behalf, but that in some way, somehow, a method must be found of raising it. Therefore, at the earliest opportunity, if this bill becomes a law, I may introduce some measure which will provide for a means of financing this appropriation.

"The tax collector is never a popular fellow, but I believe the time has come when it must be impressed upon the people who are the recipients of federal munificence that the appropriations which are voted in their behalf are not just manufactured out of thin air."

GLORIA VANDERBILT.

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, 15 years old, heiress and subject of a legal custody fight in 1934, was reported to be doing well at Doctor's hospital today after an emergency appendectomy. The girl was taken to the hospital from the Fifth avenue home of her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, last night. Her mother, Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt, was reported to be in Europe.

MRS. J.'S BUSY; HER DRACAENA PLANT'S IN BUD

Mrs. Winifred Jensen wouldn't go to a party these nights if she were the guest of honor. Her dracaena's blooming, and it blooms only at night, and then only every seven years. And she wants to be around to enjoy it in her home at 3506 Pierce avenue.

The dracaena has eighteen clusters, each with twenty to thirty fragrant white flowers. They open between 6 and 7 each evening. They're still open when Mrs. Jensen quits watching them to go to bed, but no matter how early she gets up in the morning she can't catch them open.

The dracaena will be through the ceiling before it blooms again. Mrs. Jensen doesn't know whether it's worth chopping a hole. But August Koch, chief horticulturist of the parks, said last night that she can whack off the top without hurting the dracaena. What's more, he said, it will bloom oftener if she'll starve it a little.

H. A. Morgan Confirmed for 9 Year TVA Post

Washington, D. C., May 8.—(AP)—The senate today unanimously confirmed the nomination of Harcourt A. Morgan for another nine-year term as a director of the Tennessee Valley authority.

An open letter to those who think they can't afford Air Conditioning!

For years now you have wanted greater comfort in your home during summer heat. But the cost of air conditioning has been too high.

Today, however, we are proud to offer the essential phases of air conditioning to everyone for as little as $5 down...with the remaining payments to suit your convenience.

The unit we offer at this price meets a long standing need. For it can be installed as easily as a radio...in home or office. It works equally well in a new building or old...in a detached house or apartment.

It is called the Air Pilot—a portable room ventilator. It brings in roomfuls of fresh air ...filters and cleans it...circulates it gently ...shuts out street and traffic noises...and above all, lets you sleep in cool, quiet comfort.

And you may try the Air Pilot for one week before purchase. Then when you decide to buy... the amount you paid for the trial becomes your down payment. And you pay the rest...amounting to a few cents a day...over a year's time.

Try the Air Pilot now. Just say, "I want to try the Air Pilot for one week."

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

THE MILK REPORT.

The commission appointed by Lieut. Gov. Stelle to investigate milk price controls in half a dozen states has reported unanimously against such schemes. The investigation was undertaken because the Illinois legislature is now being pressed to enact a milk control law. The aim of the inquiry was to discover how such regulation has worked where it has been tried.

The most striking fact about the report was its unanimity. The members of the commission represented farmers, organized labor, dairy companies, and consumers, and the chairman is a professor of the University of Illinois. None of the interests represented could find merit in political price fixing. It has injured all concerned.

Curiously enough, though these schemes have generally resulted in raising the price of fresh milk to the consumers, the consumers have suffered least. They quickly discovered that they could use powdered milk or canned milk as substitutes for fresh milk. The principal victims were the farmers, the dairy workers, and the dairy companies. All of these interests prosper as the volume of fresh milk sold in the cities rises. When higher prices led to reduced sales the producers and distributors of milk all along the line found themselves worse off than before.

The lesson that political price fixing is no cure for depressed conditions in an industry, but only makes matters worse, is a hard one to learn and a great many people haven't learned it yet. It is encouraging for the future welfare of this state to find that representative farmers, business men, and organized labor, as well as consumers, have now seen the light. The character of the report suggests that in Illinois, at least, no more time and effort will be wasted in following a false lead.

The story the price fixers tell is always plausible to the uninitiated. The economist has no difficulty in disclosing the fallacy in the schemes, but his theoretical presentation generally falls on deaf ears. What does he know about farming or driving a milk wagon? If we can't make a living at present prices we must have higher prices and the only way to get higher prices is to impose them by law.

In meeting these arguments the report of the commission of practical men and women has been particularly valuable. It speaks with the voice of experience. If the plan proposed for Illinois is sound it should have worked out well in the other places where it has been tried in substantially identical form. The commission studied the operations of milk control laws in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Indiana, and Wisconsin, and found that neither federal nor state regulation had done anything but harm to every one concerned.

The report can't be ignored as the work of inexperienced and impractical men; the members of the commission were chosen precisely because of their experience and standing in the industry. Neither can the conclusions be laughed off as the work of men who have no real interest in the welfare of the industry in its various branches. Precisely the opposite is true. If the price control scheme had offered any substantial hope of increased income to farmers, dairy companies, dairy labor, or consumers, the report would not have been unanimous.

In a sense it is too bad that price fixing will not solve our depression problems; if the solution could be made to work the depression would no longer be with us. But the solution has been tried again and again and it won't work. Those who continue to promote the price control laws are stubbornly refusing to accept facts.

LOONY WAR BILLS.

The month's award for the looniest bill in congress goes to Senator Josh Lee, Democrat of Oklahoma, who has worked through the senate military affairs committee a favorable report on a proposal to draft capital in event of war, to classify citizens according to wealth, and force the buying of bonds in amounts proportionate to means. It is a pet idea of many law tinkers that as soon as the country must go into high gear to produce war materials the productive activities should be brought to a standstill by strange burocratic interference.

The country raises money for war by collecting taxes and selling bonds. Loyal citizens always respond by buying the bonds and all citizens who make money must meet the tax collector. Tax rates are increased and during the war and for years afterward the income of the country is assessed to pay the costs. The more money a man makes, the more he pays.

Even now, in peace times, the tax collector can take—and does—as high as 72 per cent of a citizen's annual earnings. War rates would be even higher and war profits would go into the United States treasury. Already the profit motive, the greatest stimulus human activity can have, has been so impaired that the people will not or cannot invest their savings in productive enterprise. The number of new companies organized has been decreasing in the years of the New Deal and government operations have been absorbing the greater part of capital, which in a freer economy would be used to promote production and afford employment.

Senator Lee illustrates why the people of the United States have two good reasons for dreading war. They naturally do not want to make the human sacrifices which might be avoided with the use of good sense and they fear they would lose their liberty under a fantastic and destructive war dictatorship. The soldiers of the United States fought the war in France very well, considering all the handicaps imposed on a nation springing to arms the way this country did. But the American government fought it very badly at home, in spite of the loyal endeavors of American citizens to do everything they could.

That supplies were kept pouring into France in the volume they did was due to the talent of the American business man and producer, where he was free to use his ability and was not interfered with by some government official who didn't know how to run the business he endeavored to boss. The burocrats were still trying to produce a machine gun, an airplane, and an improvement on the French .75 when the war ended.

A few laws such as Senator Lee's would cause a greater disaster on the home front than a terrible defeat would inflict on the fighting front, and the one might very easily cause the other.

WAITING THE EVENT IN EUROPE.

People to whom the European dictatorships are the most detestable of modern national developments are naturally prone to welcome any suggestion that signs of weakness are appearing in the totalitarian states. The wish that collapse might be hastened gives credibility to every report of internal troubles and exaggerates the significance of indications of wavering or uncertainty. Just now is one of the moments when the guesses may be all wrong.

Superficially it might seem that Herr Hitler is hesitating in a manner unusual to him and is counting costs with a greater prudence. That does not fit in with his customary strategy, which has been to present boldness and decision, with a peremptory command and a quick follow-up, to the indecision and reluctance of his European adversaries.

Poland is, of course, the largest and most formidable country upon which he has yet made demands. It is also supported by the most uncompromising and unqualified pledges yet given by Great Britain and France. They promised things to Czecho-Slovakia and did not deliver. Their record as allies has not been good for a year. But this time they have given Poland such definite promises that a backdown would seem to be out of the question. Both the French and British governments have said they will come to the assistance of the Poles and they have said that Poland shall be the sole judge of whether its independence and territorial integrity are jeopardized by anything undertaken by the Berlin-Rome combination.

The conservative ruler wanting to spare his people the costs of a great war would do as Hitler is now doing in handling the questions presented by Danzig and the corridor. He would not act abruptly and take the consequences, but would examine the possibilities of negotiation and conciliation. That, however, has not been Hitler's method. He makes his demands. If they are rejected, or if the compliance is not immediate, he acts to prove that he is completely the master of the situation. He has said that he will have Danzig incorporated in the reich and that he will have a corridor across the corridor.

The Poles have told him that he cannot have what he has demanded, in the way in which he has demanded it, because his solution would be unfair to Poland and is not necessary to Germany. The stories that he is seeking some way out which will not require force and will not risk a war may not be dependable, but at least there have been several days of silence, whether that be proved ominous or not.

The understanding with Italy has been put in the form of specifications and, although it is probably no more definite than it was before, it has the appearance now of a tight military alliance. There are indications that this alliance is more favored by Mussolini than it is by the Italian people. It is apparently true that the German military missions in Italy have made an unpleasant impression upon many Italians.

There is no doubt in the German military mind that Germany is master of the alliance and it would be difficult for the Italian people not to perceive that they were not regarded as quite the equals of the larger partner. There is no natural nationalist sympathy between the Italians and the Germans. The Italians and the Poles are closer in sentiment, and a Polish war probably would give Italy more grief than profit.

It may be that Russia will offer the solution to Hitler's problem. If he could even neutralize Russia the cost of direct action in taking Danzig might be greatly reduced. An agreement with Stalin might easily persuade Hitler that he was master of Europe and no one could challenge him. Trustworthy sources of information say that Stalin's policy is for an agreement with Hitler. An honest agreement of ideas would seem absurd, but there is no honesty of idea in Stalin. Hitler is a creature of simpler emotions. He has zealously persuaded himself that he hates communism, although in dictatorship Stalin is his true cousin.

THOMAS HART BENTON MALIGNS THE MULE.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

Thomas Hart Benton, that nationally known painter who was born and reared down in Neosho, lives up to his reputation for being a most opinionated man by flatly declaring that one of the state's most illustrious sons, the Missouri mule, is "a damned dramatic animal." On the other hand, an article written for an encyclopedia by Frederick B. Mumford, dean and director of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture, refers to the long eared Bucephalus of the Ozarks as "exceptionally free from excitability and harmful nervousness." Another encyclopedia adds that the rhinoceros-hided he-hawer "possesses sobriety, patience and endurance."

It may be that Artist Benton has had an unfortunate experience at one end or the other of a mule. And there's no doubt about it—when the mule lets fly with his heels he puts a triphammer to shame for speed and punch. He also can make the most wicked use of his big teeth. Furthermore, the mule has a constitution that is the cumulative result of generations of pulling impossible loads through gumbo, feeding on thistles, enduring blazing sun in August and zero blizzard in January, and absorbing stings of malarial mosquitoes and vicious yellow jackets. As the Italians said in Rome when they dedicated a monument to the Missouri mule for his impressed services in the Ethiopian conquest, he "is indestructible."

So, Mr. Benton, you take a fellow like that, do something really to ruffle his aplomb, and he's going to be just as dramatic as Vesuvius in eruption. But if you let him alone he's just an humble beast of burden.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

MR. PEPYS OMITS HORSES.

8th May—This past week-end I did spend mainly in rejoicing that spring had come in answer to my proclamation that the Mackinaw winds were ended, and yet it did seem more like midsummer than the merry Maytime. So I enjoyed my holiday in looking at flowering trees, and giving thanks for apple blossoms outside my window, and eke in going to my tailor for a new summer suiting, very jaunty in color.

On Saturday, close to sunset, I did listen to the public heralding of the great Darby race according to my yearly custom, though why I do so I hardly know, for horses are not my fancy and I see no reason for excitement over eight animals scuttling around a track, all their fire and fury over and done with in the space of two minutes.

A year from now not one man in ten thousand can name for you the beasts that ran around the track, and yet that day their names were on every one's lips and you thought they would be famous forever. Perhaps, I told myself, it is the wagering which stirs up the gentry, and flash companions, and the small folk, too; for it seems a law of human nature to try to get money for nothing. The thrill of such a reward is so great that one winning counts for more than nine losings, although not in the purse.

This is a false notion of life, I thought, but when I read my history books I find the human race has had many worse delusions, and there was a Roman emperor who elected his horse first consul. Of his lunacy, however, there is no doubt.

IN DEFENSE OF SPRING POETS.

There's nothing novel to be said of Spring;
Like Love, it is a topic long worn out.
But would you then have poets cease to sing?
Suppose Burns, Keats or Shelley had a doubt
That they had aught to add to that great store
Of song left us by Shakespeare, Milton, Gray;
What would the world have lost! O, say no more!
The bard must needs give voice to his heart's lay
No other Spring was ever like to this;
Emotions new it did arouse and strange:
And Love's sweet pain, its thrill, each look, each kiss,
With every pair of lovers still does change.
So sing, ye minstrels! Sing, and have no fear;

That Missing Dollar Puzzle.

The puzzle about the three men in a $30 hotel room, reduced to $25 [5-5-'39], was a neat little article, was it not? A grist of answers, most of them correct, came in by the first mail, and all day long the Linemaster's telephone was buzzing with pleas for a solution from people who said that the missing $1 was driving them crazy.

Well, here is the answer:

First of all, the puzzle as stated leads you into an illogical calculation. The three men paid $30, and received a $3 refund; thus the cost of a $25 room to them was $27. The bellboy held out $2 of the original $30.

You should not add that $2 to the $27, making $29, and ask what became of the other $1 in the $30. You should subtract the bellboy's $2 from the $27, making $25, the correct cost of the room.

There was no missing dollar.

The Mystery of Keefe Castle.

In Park Manor at the end of 69th street, from Anthony avenue to South Chicago avenue, is little known Keefe avenue. Old Keefe castle stands sentinel at its head; its twin castle has recently been razed. There is interesting history here, but who knows more of it? W. A. G.

CAREER OF A PACIFIST.

When young Tam left the classic fold
O' smug auld Princeton,
A pacifist he swore he'd be
An' never bear a gun.

Noo, when he's auld and bald, ye ken,
Wi' feet sae muckle flat,
He swears he'd gladly fecht at drap

There is a reason for this change;
A reason plain as day:
Because o' his auld pursy paunch

Towpaths on the Chicago River.

I was astonished to see that twice [April 25 and May 1] you published items about those lovers' lanes from La Salle to Wells streets on the north side of the river without some contributor telling you what they really are.

These narrow walks, at the ground level, are not lanes at all, but towpaths. They date back to the Illinois and Michigan canal. The original land grant for this waterway took into consideration a three foot width along each bank to provide for mule power for the boats.

When the canal was put out of competition by the advent of the railroads, in most instances it was easy to revert the towpaths to the adjoining lands because there had been no great appreciation in value. But at the location above cited where the prices rose to a filthy figure it caused complications. Builders were advised not to build upon this towpath width, thereby excluding the possibility of a costly legal dispute with the government.

The loop has its cow path but the Chicago river has towpaths. S. Nosakcid.

The Indians of Rogers Park.

Estes avenue, in the Rogers Park district, was named after the Estes family which settled in that section in 1869, coming from Keokuk, Ia., where James Lee Estes had just concluded four terms as sherif. During his tenure of office he hanged four men convicted of riotous incidents involving Mormonism in Nauvoo, Ill., where Joseph Smith, the founder, was killed.

The Estes family, distantly related to Robert E. Lee, owned about 500 acres in the area, on a government grant. It was then a lonesome country populated mostly by Indians. Nat Wharton.

A suggestion for the cure of Mr. Wrigley's woes and the Cubs' fainting spells: When the régime of Gabby Hartnett ends, let no manager ever be appointed from the players. Such a policy will dispose of all the ingrowing grouches.

WHY SOME TOTS FAIL TO GAIN WEIGHT.

WHENEVER a child fails to put on weight consistently the incident may be regarded by parents as an occasion for anxiety. They fear tuberculosis or some other distressing malady. Now and then the whole matter presents a real puzzle although often the cause is easily identified in an acute upset. We have no right to insist that every tot should be chubby. Some will not belong to this type while others will shoot up so rapidly that regardless of an average intake they will be unable to store nutriment.

Activity must be taken into account. Despite a generous table, some boys and girls use up all their energy at play. This leaves them without a credit balance for the rounding out of body contours. With babies it is entirely possible that incessant crying, fussing, or restlessness may burn up reserve faster than edibles can provide it. This explains why so many nervous, jittery children are thin and pale. They are unable to become heavier because food is used up en route to the storage depots. A rest or sleep periods must be lengthened. With some, a mild sedative may be demanded.

We can understand that fever means a faster rate of combustion. Tissues are being oxidized so speedily that a corresponding decline in poundage is inevitable. An infection that persists for a week or ten days may so deplete the system that a month or even more will be essential for the restoration of avoirdupois.

In the event of a wasting illness, such as an intestinal infection, the patient—for quite some time—will have to be coaxed back to normal in both digestion and absorption. It has been well said that after one of these bouts the alimentary tract seems to have lost its cunning in the utilization of food. Great patience is called for and small but frequent feedings are suggested. Let the youngster live out of doors as much as possible, well protected against drafts. In severe cases, blood transfusion will be helpful as will tiny doses of insulin.

For the most part we can forget trouble in the digestive tube. In fact, it is exceedingly rare with a growing child. On the other hand, if diabetes is present [with the evidence of sugar in the urine], and if the stools contain large quantities of undigested nutriment [fat or starch] we must look to the character as well as the size of the meals. Occasionally too much of one factor will upset the dissolving and the absorbing machinery so that not enough nourishment enters the circulation. Now and then the absence of an adequate proportion of calcium will bring about so marked a disturbance in the assimilation of fat that weight loss will be marked.

Starvation can occur in the midst of plenty and it must be emphasized over and over again that a complete diet must contain the various nutritional elements including minerals and vitamins. One that is made up of an overplus of carbohydrates, with a corresponding deficiency in proteins or fats, may lead to decrease of strength as well as of pounds.

Even in the breast fed—with the mother producing plenty of milk—the schedule may require adjustment if growth is to proceed as it should. Sometimes overfeeding may distend the tiny gastric pouch which can hold only so much. As a result, the infant spits up a sizable portion imbibed at each nursing and thus may be receiving actually less than he needs. If this takes place consistently day after day not only will gains be slight but there may be some reduction. If one could add up the value of the vomited food the reason would be clear.

We must be especially particular about the overactive lad who lives on excitement. I recall very well several such boys—ranging from 3 to 4 years of age—who appeared to be unable to gain. Adding a bit to the carbohydrate supply and increasing the number of hours of rest did the trick.

IODIDE AND SYPHILIS.

R. J. writes: What effect does iodide have in the treatment of syphilis? Does it kill the germ?

REPLY.

Sodium or potassium iodide is useful in this disease. Iodine is needed by the body. It is thought that supplying this element aids certain internal secretions and places the system in better fighting trim. There is probably some effect on the circulation. But these chemicals do not possess the slightest power to destroy the cause of syphilis—the spirochetes.

VISIBLE PULSE.

H. M. writes: What causes a fast pulsation on the right side of the neck of a boy of 7 years?

REPLY.

In all probability, throbbing visible in the neck is caused by blood passing through an artery. In this persons this phenomenon is seen in various parts of the body. The chances are that there is no organic difficulty although a careful examination by your physician will answer the question.

SINUSES AND CLIMATE.

O. N. writes: I have been told that Arizona climate will cure sinus disease. Is this true?

REPLY.

Sinus infections often respond to a dry, sunny, clear atmosphere. Some cases are not helped at all. A person would have to locate permanently in such a region for good results, however. A stay of a few weeks would have but little, if any, effect.

RECTAL PROLAPSE.

H. W. writes: What causes a prolapse of the rectum?

REPLY.

This term may apply either to the lining of the rectum or to the entire lower portion of the tube. In either case the supporting tissues have become stretched and lax and, as a result, the parts protrude. In children the chief cause is malnutrition which is responsible for underweight. In adults, the most frequent cause is dysentery.

NOT PROBABLE.

L. T. writes: Is there any chance that a boy of 20 will grow any more?

REPLY.

Very little. In certain instances growth continues beyond this age but, as a rule, no more is to be expected.

RARE, BUT POSSIBLE.

O. T. writes: Is it possible to be born with a defective heart?

REPLY.

Fortunately, such a condition is rare although there are a number of well authenticated cases—blue babies, for example.

RUSSIAN PLANES IN SPAIN.

Chicago, May 4.—Much has been said of the Spanish civil war providing a testing ground for war materials of various nations, but evidently the conclusions drawn have been far from unanimous.

A paragraph from the April 19 issue of "The Aeroplane," leading English aviation journal, may be of interest. C. G. Grey, editor, says, in response to a suggestion that Britain buy needed planes from Russia as well as the United States: "Anybody who knows anything about Russian airplanes knows that structurally they are just about the worst junk that any body every produced, although they certainly were fast. The Russian-built Boeings and their imitation American motors in Spain were faster than the old Heinkel biplanes which the Nationalists had at first. But they could not compete with the newer Heinkels and Messerschmidts which came later. And as fighting machines they were utterly defeated by the solid little Fiat biplanes, which were slower but did not break up in a dive as did the Boeings. The result was that in spite of superior numbers of Russian airplanes and pilots the Reds were practically driven out of the air by the middle of 1938."

I don't believe this opinion conformed to that prevalent in this country. In fact, didn't we think just the opposite—that soviet planes were the one thing that did fly rings around Fascist equipment?

DIRTY CHICAGO.

Chicago, April 30.—In today's TRIBUNE I read of the program to be sponsored by the Association of Commerce for a bigger and better Chicago.

One worth while project which every Chicago group and paper should back is that of educating our citizens to cleaner habits. On a tour of the so-called backward south, from Chicago to New Orleans, down the west coast of Florida, north through the Carolinas and Virginia to Washington, then home through Ohio and Indiana, we did not visit one city that could compare with Chicago in dirty civic housekeeping!

In Jacksonville, Fla., and Savannah, Ga., where the population seemed preponderantly of the poor Negro class, we saw no litter of papers, discarded wearing apparel and garbage as we find them on the streets and in the vacant lots of Chicago in our daily travels. This is a program that need not cost a dollar. Educate the people of Chicago to have some civic pride and responsibility!

WPA AND A PRIVATE JOB.

Chicago, May 4.—Employers say that men on WPA do not want work. Here is an answer to that. I have been on WPA for about a year and have tried very hard to get work at my trade.

I am a woodworking machine hand and an experienced one too. A firm advertised for a shaper hand the other day. I went to see them and told them I was on WPA, but that I wanted a job very bad and was willing to quit the WPA any time I could get a job that was half way steady.

They stated that they knew it was hard to get back on the WPA after quitting. I went on a night shift that was just starting. After seven nights they shut down.

Here I am a man who wants a job in private industry and has lost both jobs because an employer does not stop to think. L. A. E.

QUESTIONS BY A STRANGER.

Chicago, May 1.—I am a native born Haitian, have been a citizen in this country for three years, and I am fortunate to hold a position with an importing company, due to the fact that I speak French, Spanish, German, Italian, Russian, and English. In my native country this is not strange, but here it seems strange—a black face among thirty whites in our office. Now they have become accustomed to me.

What I want to know is this—why do the white Americans dislike the black ones so? As far as they are concerned, the black ones should not hold good positions, only heavy labor. Why? As far as I can understand, the black Americans are very loyal and good toward the white ones.

And another thing. When the white ones pay $35 a month for rent, and move out, black ones move in and the rent goes up to $45 or $50, and the best of their salaries is $15 a week for men, while white Americans average from $25 to $50 a week. Why so much injustice?

And, please, one more question. Is it the custom for the woman to give money to the man? Every man I meet wants to know if I am employed, and when I tell him where, right then he wants to buy a car with my money. Does that go for the white Americans also?

ANTOINETTE BEAUCAIRE.

WHO IS READY?

Evanston, Ill., May 3.—At a movie the other night Cordell Hull was pictured in a newsreel. He said words to the effect that whether there was to be war or whether we were to remain at peace, we were ready.

Whom does he mean by "we"? Are we mothers ready to send our sons to battle on foreign soil? Are our sons ready to fight for foreign nations that have failed to pay their world war debts?

Let congress pass the Ludlow amendment and find out how ready we are.

ELINOR L. ADCOCK.

WAR HYSTERIA.

Chicago, May 2.—Recently one of your contributors stated that THE TRIBUNE was a so-and-so because it expressed apprehension lest Roosevelt's big mouth should get us into a war. He qualified himself as a person whose opinions should carry weight by stating that he had had ancestors in the recent wars.

Lest it be assumed that all persons who had ancestors in wars agree with this contributor, this writer rises to state that his family has also had ancestors in wars, in fact, in quite a few wars, including the world war, the Spanish war, the civil war, the war of 1812, the revolutionary war, and a long line of previous wars, including the battle of Agincourt and the battle of Hastings. Having thus qualified to speak in this field, the writer is of the opinion that THE TRIBUNE is accomplishing a very worthy and patriotic service by condemning all such weasel and politically framed offerings as Mr. Roosevelt's epistle to the Germanic Philistines.

The whole war hysteria arises from our itch—or the itch of some of us—to tell them how to run the affairs of Europe. The headlines of the day say, "One million men ready for war in three months." If any great percentage of the young people feel like those that this writer talks with, the war mongers would have difficulty in mustering three men in one million months to dig more trenches in Europe. DAD.

WHAT ABOUT CAMPAIGN PROMISES?

Niles, Ill., May 5.—About one month ago I read that the general assembly at Springfield was discussing the enactment of a law to subject young persons of criminal tendencies to the lie detector before being released from any corrective institutions.

I believe, as do many other citizens, that politicians and grafters should also be compelled by law to submit to the test of this instrument before taking office and during the term of office when suspicion and evidence accuse them of shady dealings. JOHN KLUESING.

Test Your Facts

Below each of the following questions are listed three answers. Make your choice, turn to page 32 in the Want Ad section for the correct answers, and mark your score:

1. Which state claims more Presidents as native sons than any other? [a] Ohio, [b] Virginia, [c] New York.
2. How long must an alien live in this country before he may become a citizen? [a] Five years, [b] seven years, [c] ten years.
3. Where are the islands of Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, and Jersey? [a] Philippines, [b] English channel, [c] West Indies.
4. The Wars of the Roses were fought between what royal houses? [a] Plantagenet vs. Lancaster, [b] Lancaster vs. York, [c] Tudor vs. Stuart.

RIGHT TO ASSETS.

Joliet, Ill., May 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I and some of the heirs are dissatisfied with the way mother handles the estate since father's death some twenty years ago. There was no administrator appointed and no other proceedings of any kind. Everything was left in her hands as father requested. He wanted her to have the income, and at her death it should be divided equally. Also it $9,000 was her money [inheritance and life insurance] but the rest was what they accumulated together. Some five or six years ago she decided to make a will.

1. Under these circumstances did she have a right to will both her money and also what he had at time of death?
2. She appointed two sons administrators, which is unsatisfactory to us.
3. Can other heirs appoint some one else to act in their place at her death?
4. If nothing is mentioned in the will as to bond, can other heirs compel them to furnish bond?
5. If will states specifically "without bond" can heirs compel bond? She holds notes from different heirs ranging from $1,000 to $2,000 which is to be deducted from their shares.
6. What steps can we take to prevent these two sons from having free access to these papers at her death?
7. Would a legal will be possible by one 81 years old? C. J.

1. Rights in his assets would depend in part on whether they were held in joint tenancy with his wife. Also on whether he left a will.
2. The personal representative named in a will is called the executor. Your facts are not entirely clear to us.
3. If she leaves a will the person named presumably will be the one to act.
4. If the will is silent on the point the court will require a bond, but if the will excuses a bond, that wording will control.
5. No.
6. Depends largely on what she is willing to do.
7. Depends on the proof as to her mental capacity. We advise you to go over your facts in a personal interview with an attorney. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

The joy of giving

. . . TO MOTHER

When we were very young, our gift to Mother was probably a crayon masterpiece . . . but to her it was a precious token. Now that we are six-and-some, we want to remember Her again with a gift that expresses our eternal gratitude . . . a gift to please her beyond all measure of its cost, or perhaps fulfill her heart's desire. Here are just a few very lovely things that we're sure she'll treasure; or you may prefer to give her a Field's Gift Certificate so she may choose her gift herself.

GIFT COURT on the SECOND FLOOR is a veritable wonderland of exciting gifts . . . things you just know Mother will like. Collected here are choice tidbits from all over the store to make your selections easy.

Flower Boutonnieres—as natural and lovely as those in her own garden. Whatever Her pet variety, she's sure to love these violets, carnations, lilies of the valley, sprays of primroses and the adorable little old-fashioned lace back boutonnieres. Prices range from 50c to $1.50 each. First Floor, North, State.

Sheerest, dearest blouse—for your darling Mother — with love! Moonbeam white chiffon, with a lacy jabot to remind her of Castle Walk days. Tiny pearl buttons nestling in the lace. 32 to 44. $7.95. Blouses, Sixth Floor, Middle, State.

Patrician "Satin-Thread" Hose—to indulge her wish for something particularly lovely. Truly luxurious hosiery with a sheer flattering appearance. Glorious colors of Peppermint, Sundown, Apricot, Palm Beige, and Peter Pan. Sizes 8½ to 10½. Pair, $1.65. First Floor, South, State.

Song of Years,
Bess Streeter Aldrich, $2.50
The Patriot, Pearl Buck, $2.50
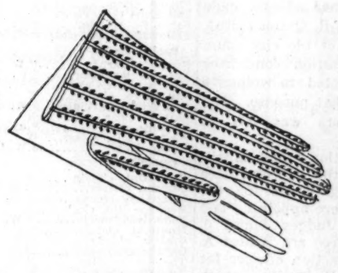
Third Floor, North, Wabash



French Doeskin Gloves—by Kislav. A wonderful inspiration for Mother's Day giving because she can't have too many. These are truly distinctive in their styling . . . very practical because they wash so beautifully. White only in regular sizes. Pair, $5. First Floor, South, State.

Beauvais Embroidered Bag—a gift that's always gratefully received because it is so dainty and smart. She'll love the colorful embroidery that highlights the dark background . . . and the short pannier handle is a favorite. In black or navy. $10.50. First Floor, South, State.

Spitalfields Umbrella—a gift that's out-of-the-ordinary and sure to be appreciated! You'll save now, too, because it's very specially priced. Heavy, pure dye silk and a wide assortment of smart handles to choose from. Navy, green, wine, brown or black. $5.95. First Floor, South, State.

Boudoir slippers—for a nice modern mamma. She's sure to like this little linen and rayon mule in natural, blue, pink, fuchsia, chartreuse or gay stripes, $6.75. Or this darling Daniel Green hostess pump of Skinner's satin. Blue or wine, satin lined. $5.50. Fifth Floor, Middle, Wabash.

'Kerchiefs for Mother. Field's has many styles to please Her . . . some initialed, some embroidered, some in glorious flower prints. And you have all the colors of the rainbow to choose from! Prices range from 50c to $2.50. First Floor, Middle, State.

Candies, jellies in gift packages — As the gift to your Mother on Sunday or as an extra surprise! Specially priced! Petite Chocolates, a luscious assortment. 1 to 5 pound sizes. Pound, $1. Attractive fruit jelly assortments, in unusual containers, $1.35 to $5. Third Floor, North, State.

Imported Scarfs—so distinctively chic you can tell they came from France. Sheer as cobwebs in stunning black and white hand-blocked designs. Large enough to wear in any style; tied or loose around the neck. $4. First Floor, Middle, State.

(Far Left)
A Saybury housecoat—any mother will look sweet in. A combination of stripes and polka dots with a softly draped bustline and zippered front; white, copenhagen, navy; 12 to 42. $6.95. Other styles from 12 to 44 or in half sizes. Lounging Apparel—Fifth Floor, South, State.

(Left)
Printed gown—of softest satin. A darling nightie, youthful but not too frivolous for Mother. She'll love the style, the way it fits and the soft colored Spring flowers on pink, blue, white or yellow; 32 to 40. $5.95. Lingerie—Fifth Floor, South, Wabash.

A sweet little bouquet—tucked under glass to preserve your Mother's Day thought for years. $1.75

Potted violets—speak your Mother's Day sentiment for you. Abington pot in white, yellow, dubonnet, green or turquoise. $1.25

3 potted plants—growing in Haeger pottery window box. In white, yellow or turquoise. $1.59 complete. Also growing plants in containers from 50c to $2. Large peony with bud, 3 for $1.

Second Floor, Middle, Wabash

"Mon Image" perfume—One of the nicest compliments you can pay to a charming woman! "Mon Image" is the glorious carnation fragrance that subtly blends with her own personality. Appropriately packaged in a fascinating little mirror box. Bottle, $2.50 and $5. Dusting powder to match, $3. Cologne, $2.50

REPEAL OF 3 DAY NOTICE TO WED IS VOTED BY HOUSE

Medical Test Bars Hasty Marriage, Saltiel Says.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 8.—[Special.]—Deciding that the law requiring physical examinations is a sufficient safeguard against hasty marriages, the house late tonight passed a bill to eliminate the need for three days' notice of intention to wed in Illinois. The measure has yet to receive senate concurrence.

Representative Edward P. Saltiel [R., Chicago], father of the pre-marital examination law, strongly urged repeal of the three days' notice clause.

Makes Survey of Clerks.

"My honest opinion is that this bill would help the operations of the pre-marital examination law," Saltiel said. "I made a survey among the 101 county clerks. All except one agreed with me."

It usually takes three or four days for a couple to get a certificate stating they are free from venereal disease. This serves the same purpose as the three day notice of intention clause, said Saltiel.

Many couples having the medical certificate go to the county clerk with a wedding party, only to learn to their surprise that they must still file three days' notice, said Saltiel. Rather than change their plans, such couples usually go to other states to be married, he declared.

Opposed by Adamowski.

The bill was opposed by Benjamin S. Adamowski, leader of the Democratic minority. Unethical physicians sign medical certificates without making an examination, so that three days' notice of intent still is necessary to prevent gin mill marriages, he said.

"That might happen in your county of Cook, but it doesn't happen in mine," said Ben S. Rhodes [R., Normal]. "We don't have that type of doctors down where I live."

The bill received a vote of 90 to 15.

HORNER SUFFERS A SETBACK; TOLD TO REST IN BED

Springfield, Ill., May 8.—[Special.]—Gov. Horner's physicians hung a figurative, "no visitors" sign on the door of the executive mansion today, the result of a setback the governor experienced after a too strenuous week-end. They ordered him into seclusion for a day or two, until he had regained the strength he has lost.

Ten days ago the governor took a long automobile drive into southern Illinois— an expedition which left him exhausted. The strength he built up during this Florida rest was dissipated, to some extent, over the week-end and the governor was ordered to bed.

Mrs. Helen Swift Neilson Fights $117,424 Tax Claim

Mrs. Helen Swift Neilson's protest against government claims for $117,424 in additional income taxes for 1934 and 1935 was received in Washington yesterday. Mrs. Neilson contends the government failed to credit stock loss deductions and business expenses. She is a member of the Swift packing family and the wife of Francis Neilson. Her home is at 4800 Drexel boulevard.

Alaska Engineer Gets Chicago Coast Guard Job

Lieutenant Commander Joseph D. Conway of the United States coast guard arrived in Chicago yesterday from far away Alaska to take up new duties as engineering officer of the Chicago coast guard division. He will start officially on his new job on May 20. His office will be in the United States postoffice building. Commander Conway served on the cutter Spencer in Alaskan waters.

CITY'S TRACTION NEGOTIATORS TO BE NAMED TODAY

Appointment of members of a traction subcommittee to represent the city in negotiations for a comprehensive traction ordinance will be made today by Ald. James R. Quinn [50th]. Quinn is chairman of the city council's local transportation committee which yesterday voted to create a subcommittee for that purpose. The number of members was left to Quinn's discretion.

Drafting of a traction franchise will be carried on by the subcommittee and the three negotiators for the transit lines who were appointed last week by Federal Judges James J. Wilkerson. The three are Walter A. Shaw, chairman, traction adviser for the court; Guy A. Richardson, president of the Chicago Surface Lines, and Col. A. A. Sprague, trustee of the elevated lines.

Warned that deadlines fixed by the Public Works administration in the $18,000,000 subway grant were approaching rapidly, the committee decided to see what progress can be made on the unified traction franchise before seeking extensions.

CHARGES EFFORT BY GOVERNMENT TO SOW DISSENT

America must guard itself against the propaganda of its central government if it would save its liberty, Wayland Brooks, Republican candidate for governor in 1936, said last night. He spoke before 1,000 railroad passenger trafic representatives in the Hotel Sherman.

Brooks declared the central government through propaganda is attempting to sow dissent throughout the nation. This propaganda makes use of such catch phrases as "economic royalists," "big business," "sixty families."

There is a common thread in the schemes of the rulers in Russia, Italy, and Germany — destruction of the courts, he said, and that same thread was found in this country. The reason for attacking the courts, Brooks said, is because that agency of government is the keeper of precedent, which in this country means liberty.

MOTHER'S DAY IS BARGAIN DAY FOR TELEPHONE CALLS

• Rates on out-of-town telephone calls are reduced as much as 40% on Mother's Day . . . and every Sunday throughout the year. If you can't go home on special occasions or family anniversaries, why not take advantage of these reduced rates* to send personal greetings . . . in your own voice? There's a touch of magic to a telephone call "back home." In fact, many families hold regular telephone visits with absent members, because the pleasure is so great — and the cost so small.

On Mother's Day, and Every Sunday, You Can Telephone:

About 140 miles.....for 45 cents
About 290 miles.....for 70 cents
About 390 miles.....for 90 cents

*These same rates prevail every night in the week after 7 P. M. Reduction applies when initial rate exceeds 35 cents. All rates quoted are for station-to-station calls.

Cotton Checks and Stripes Gay, Cool and Smart

BY RHEA SEEGER.

If the summer clothes designers have their way there will not be a sloppily dressed shopper in sight. The cotton daytime and street outfits, priced way, way down to skimpy budget limits, are the gayest, smartest loot in town.

You'll look cool and scrupulously well scrubbed in the newest checked and striped affairs—those with a fitted, short sleeved waistcoat blouse top and the four gored simple short skirt. It sounds ordinary, but see them before you reject them. Either precise small checks or the narrow stripes are available.

Around the demure, square cut necklines and repeated just above the hem of the skirt is old-fashioned snow white eyelet embroidery, as young and fresh as anything you wore in the nursery. Pink and white, china blue and white are the choice of colors. The tops are quilted in a charming old-fashioned small pattern.

If you still yearn for dirndls, they have some beauties also in the same colors. The tops fit smoothly and give that Joan of Arc effect with their untrimmed simplicity. The skirts are gathered, and two side pockets are outlined with marshmallow white rickrack braid.

You can't beat the lure of half-inch checked gingham in such unusual combines as two shades of raspberry red or two shades of green. See the umbrella tucked skirt numbers, with simple blouse tops, to use as a good looking afternoon dress, town or country, with a big, floppy leghorn hat. Or lose your heart to a brown and white checked winner made into a deceptively simple tailleur, with cuffs, convertible collar and a row of neat pearl buttons, or the snappy smartness of dove gray and white striped chambray, also tailored to the last seam and worn with dubonnet accents, belt, buttons and a wide sun hat of the same shade.

Not a single dress described is priced prohibitively. You can buy three and not have a twinge of the conscience and you'll look like a cool million in any of them on the warmest day.

Good Morning!

This is a very gloomy little number which would show how terribly wrong circumstantial evidence can be and into what dire depths it CAN plunge the innocent.

And so you see happy and honest Taxi Driver "Brick" Tennant and his unsinning friend, Joe Linden, convicted of a murder they'd never even heard of, and sentenced to death in the electric chair. . . . The pardon comes too near being too late to permit your having any fun watching the picture.

Henry Fonda and Alan Baxter—that slim, poker faced chap who usually plays killers, do good work as the accused, though I prefer Mr. Baxter as a "heavy." . . . Maureen O'Sullivan as Waitress Mary Roberts, who'd been all set to marry "Brick" when the police closed in on him and whose frenzied endeavors in his behalf finally save his life, gives an earnest, though sometimes rather too dramatic, performance. . . . Other players handle excellently rôles that are, in the main, well written.

The film has considerable suspense—and sends you away from the theater as gloomy as all get out.

Red Cross Luncheon.

The annual meeting and luncheon of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross will be held at 12 o'clock today at the Blackstone hotel. James T. Nicholson, manager of the chapter, will be the speaker.

Mardi Burnham to Join Ranks of June Brides

BY JUDITH CASS.

ADDED to the list of June brides is one who will be an especially beautiful one, Miss Mardi Burnham, the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Burnham of Evanston. She is engaged to Neil Williams, son of Mrs. Grace Neil Williams and the late Arista Bedford Williams, also of Evanston. The day in June has not been set.

Miss Burnham has been sought after to model in St. Luke's and other fashion shows ever since she finished her schooling and refused a formal debut. Tall, slim, and blonde, she will make an outstanding bride.

Miss Burnham attended Rosemary Hall in Greenwich, Conn., the Chateau Brillantmont in Lausanne, Switzerland, and College Montmorency in Paris.

Mr. Williams is a graduate of the Northwestern Military and Naval academy, and of Darmouth college, where he was a member of the Dragon senior society, and of Green Key. He received his degree at the Northwestern university school of law in 1928.

Mary Jean Bartelme to Be Bride on June 9.

The date for the marriage of Miss Mary Jean Bartelme, niece of Mrs. Dorothy Bartelme of Hubbard Woods, to Robert Hosmer Brew has been set for Friday, June 9. The ceremony will take place at 5:30 o'clock in the home of Mrs. Bartelme, which also is the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Ferdinand Bartelme, in Sheridan road. The Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard of Christ church, Winnetka, will officiate.

Miss Inez Krech of New York will be maid of honor for her Vassar classmate. Miss Betty Crilly and Miss Anne Harding will be the bridesmaids. Mr. Brew, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Brew of Rochester, N. Y., will have his brother, Richard Brew, as best man. Ushering will be J. Houston M. Cinch and Howard Fogg.

No formal announcement of the engagement was made. The daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Tonnies T. Bartelme, Miss Bartelme prepared at the North Shore Country Day school. She was graduated from Vassar last June. She and Miss Harding were debutantes of the 1935-'36 season.

Mr. Brew attended the University of Rochester and Dartmouth and is engaged in business in Chicago. He and his bride will live in Winnetka.

Paul V. Harper Jr. Will Wed Eastern Girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. Harper and Miss Jane Harper will be going east late in the summer for the wedding of Paul V. Harper Jr. and Miss Phyllis Sweetser, whose engagement has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sweetser of Newton, Mass. Miss Sweetser will be graduated from Wellsley college in June. She and young Mr. Harper plan to be married toward the end of summer, perhaps on Aug. 29, which will be his parents' silver wedding anniversary.

Mr. Harper is studying at the Harvard school of medicine and he and his bride will live near there in Boston for several years until he finishes his medical course. He is the grandson of the late William Rainey Harper, first president of the University of Chicago, and Mrs. Harper, and of George Vincent, formerly associated with the University of Chicago and later president of the Rockefeller Foundation, and Mrs. Vincent, who now live in Greenwich, Conn.

Antiquarians Hold Spring Tea Today

The Antiquarian society's spring tea is a party to which members and friends look forward with keen pleasure each year. The directors always plan something unusual to interest their guests. At this afternoon's tea period floral decorations by members will intrigue the eye, and a talk by Daniel Catton Rich, director of fine arts of the Art institute, will instruct on "Decorative Arts in the Museum of Tomorrow."

The floral arrangements are elaborate. The entire architectural gallery of the Art institute is being done over as a London street, complete to the last details, by Mrs. Walter S. Brewster. Mrs. Charles S. Dewey is in charge of decorating an English shop front in the manner of a flower ship. Mrs. James Ward Thorne's realistic copy of a needlepoint picture in flowers will be the center of attention in the small English room, gallery M-5.

Mrs. Potter Palmer is providing calla lillies to decorate the corner room, gallery M-4B, and Mrs. A. H. Patterson has loaned her tea service for the tea table, and is providing the flowers for its decoration. Miss Elizabeth Day McCormick's exhibition of embroideries from the Greek islands, which was opened with an antiquarian tea a few months ago, still is on view in some of the society's galleries. Mr. Rich will speak at 3 o'clock in gallery L-6.

To faraway Johannesburg messages of congratulations have been sent to Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. Poor [Betty Durham], who became the parents of a son late last month. Mrs. Raymond E. Durham of Hubbard Woods is the baby's maternal grandmother.

The Woman's Symphony Associates will have their first luncheon of the spring today at the home in Wilmette of Mrs. James G. Shakman. At the luncheon plans will be formulated for a membership drive and seat sale for the Woman's Symphony concerts of next season, the first of which will be given on Oct. 17 at Orchestra hall.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

There's one great trick to looking serenely cool on hot days: It's the secret of using all the psychological heat-defeaters you can find. A cologne can do it, if the scent is right. And bath glorifiers, from soap to water softeners, should be in a frangrance that suggests airy freshness.

In winter we women love bath and beauty aids in the sort of scent that enhances that grande dame sensation. But in the spring our fancy wisely strays toward lighter, brighter fragrances, the kind that suggest cooling breezes and delicate flowers. What was lush and romantic in December is apt to seem unbearably heavy come July.

One of our favorite psychological heat-defeaters is a whole family of lovely preparations in the delightfully different scent of pink clover. They made their bow last summer and women adored them. They're back again, in new dress, as charming as we thought them then. If ever a scent for summer use was utterly perfect this is it.

Of course you know what clover smells like. It's one of those fragrances you can remember when you shut your eyes and reflect on lovely drives or walks through the country. There are few perfumes as elusive, as clean and sunny and sweet. To have captured it is a triumph—and to have it for your very own, in perfume, cologne, face powder, and various bath glorifiers, from soap to water softener, is a constant joy.

The pink clover aids to freshness and fragrance aren't expensive. You could spend lots more money for things you might like less. And you can have a complete ensemble for a small sum. If you must confine yourself to just one member of the family let it be the cologne. It's a recipe for "coolth" all by itself; it feels like iced champagne against your flesh and its blithe scent clings for hours. You can have perfume, bath powder, sachet, and soap to match—and we suggest that you do if you want a perfume-harmony that will lift your spirits from day to day this summer.

The packages of all these fine preparations are smart and summery, in white and pink. You'll love to look at them.

BY CECIL SMITH.

John Barrymore is back on the stage again after fifteen years, and, to be succinct about it, he scores a terrific knockout. I don't know when I ever saw an audience have a better time at a play—right straight from beginning to end, without stopping—than at the opening performance of "My Dear Children" at the Selwyn theater last night.

Nobody in the audience had ever seen a show quite like this, for there never was one like it. With great skill and shrewdness the authors have concocted a hare-brained farce, containing almost everything Mr. Barrymore could hope for or want.

Surrounded by his three daughters and his mistress—all getting in each other's hair—and three men, none of whom is quite sure which of the girls he wants, Mr. Barrymore has the enviable job of starting nearly all the complications, and then later of trying to solve them. His greater gift for starting them than for solving them merely adds to the hilarity and confusion of the wildest evening the Chicago stage has seen in many a long moon.

Mr. Barrymore plays his part to the hilt, or, more accurately, to the tip of the tuft of his Alpine hat. He employs almost as many properties as the entire cast of "You Can't Take It with You," and squeezes the last drop of merriment out of each one. His first entry reveals him in a huge fur coat, under which, it transpires, he is in his shirtsleeves wearing a necklace of huge pine cones. Later he emerges in mountain-climbing shorts, then in a chef's apron and high white cap, then in the romantic vestments of Shakespeare.

Through all this he draws out one stop after another, now roaring like a bull; now cooing in the ear of Tala Birell, his comely Viennese mistress; now endeavoring to discover somewhere in his larynx a properly paternal tone of voice in which to address one or another of his daughters; now tossing out an indelicate ejaculation for which one probably cannot hold the authors responsible.

Frequently he stalls for time, waiting for a forgotten line to come back, as it nearly always does. Even then he is never dull and never outside his job. When he asked Doris Dudley, "What was I saying?" her ad libbed reply and his successful regaining of the track were quite as natural as the lines the authors wrote.

I have very little idea what Mr. Barrymore may have been like fifteen years ago, for I never saw him on the stage. But this present John Barrymore, telling his own portrait as Hamlet to "go to hell," is one of the most amazing and completely interesting figures the stage has to offer.

The supporting cast is good—so good, indeed, that I cannot hope to render full justice to all its members in small space. Doris Dudley, Lois Hall, and Dorothy McGuire run nip and tuck for first honors among the comely, high spirited daughters. Tala Birell, strikingly good looking, makes the scheming countess attractive without sacrificing the necessary hardness. Lloyd Gough, Philip Reed, and Stiano Braggiotti as the contrastingly typed young men are excellent. Indeed, there is nobody in the cast who ought not to be there.

"My Dear Children" will bewilder you and leave you in a whirl. You may not wholly like it, and it may occasionally shock you. But it is completely unique, and the one thing you must not do is miss it.

SYNOPSIS

Jeff Hunter, an American mining engineer, awaits execution in a Mexican jail by order of Pancho Banderas, rebel leader. A peon friend helps him escape to Texas. Jeff meets Joan Raleigh, lost in the vastness of her feudal estate, and assists her home. He meets her brothers, Bill and Phil, and Phil's wife, Mary Lou. When they learn Jeff went to college with their cousin, Raeburn, he is invited to be their guest. An old feud against the Raleighs is being renewed under the leadership of Butler Lane, suspected of poisoning their aunt, his wife, and forging her will. Banderas, routed from Mexico, has joined Lane. Jeff offers to try to make peace with the better element and, with Jim Williams, starts for the ranch of Carl Nielsen. They are pursued and fired on by Banderas and his men.

INSTALMENT XX.

AN OLIVE BRANCH.

In the crotch between two hills the setting sun had kindled a vast lake of fire, molten gold studded with streaks of garnet, topaz, opal, and amethyst. The Texas day was dying in a blaze of glory.

"I always did claim that if it wasn't for humans this world would be a right beautiful place," old Jim drawled.

"I'm wondering whether Nielsen will make it a Garden of Eden or a Valley of the Shadow for us," Jeff replied, an edge of sardonic sarcasm in his voice."

The ranch lay before them, its huddle of houses close to the river that wound through the valley. It was possible that Pancho and his men might be waiting for them at the C N—possible but not likely, since they would probably dispose of their wounded man before renewing the hunt.

They waited until dusk before they descended to the ranch house from the fringe of willows where they had been lying concealed. Williams would have liked to load a pipe, but he judged it better not to. Smoke from the bushes might attract attention. In the semi-darkness there was a restful quiet in the evening. Dim figures moved to and fro across the ranch quadrangle. Lights began to twinkle, first at the big house and later at the bunkhouse to the right.

"Time to drop in on Mr. Nielsen," Jeff said.

Old Jim pulled the boots back on his chafed feet.

"I dunno but what Fidler has the best of it at that," he grumbled. "All he has to do is step high and handsome like a turkey in a field of stubble."

They passed across a pasture, went through a wire fence, then hit the road leading to the house. It was fairly dark now, but their hearts beat fast with excitement as they crossed the quadrangle to the house. At any moment they might flush a half dozen enemies eager to wipe out their humiliation.

A wide porch ran across the front of the house. They took the steps quietly. There was a light in the room to the left which cut across the shadow of the porch. Jeff tiptoed to the window, craned forward cautiously, and looked into the room.

The family was at supper. A burly red cheeked Norwegian and two younger duplicates of himself sat at the table. At one end sat a woman, ample and matronly, on her right a pigtailed little girl of about nine. Coming into the room with a platter of steaks in her hands was another girl, perhaps twenty years old, cast in heroic mold, a fair haired blonde glowing with health and vitality. The sleeves of her print dress were rolled up to the elbows, displaying the firm flesh of arms beautiful in their conformation.

As the girl put down the platter her lifted eyes met those of Jeff looking in the window. She stared at him, startled at his presence. What she said he did not hear, but her father turned his head abruptly to look.

Jeff rejoined his friend and knocked on the door. He smiled wryly. "Caught eavesdropping," he explained.

The older man in the house flung open the door. "What do you want?" he demanded. Evidently he was of the second generation in America, since his English held no foreign accent.

His size dwarfed the other two. He stood about 6 feet 3 and was broad in proportion. An old Viking would have been proud of his beard and mustache.

"We want to have a talk with Mr. Nielsen," Jeff said.

"Why did you come to the window before you knocked?"

"Half an hour ago we escaped from Pancho Banderas' gang. I wanted to make sure he was not here."

The ranchman considered that for a moment. "What do you mean escaped from him?"

"We were attacked by them and had to wound one. He was my enemy in Mexico."

Still skeptical, Nielsen invited them dourly to come into the house. He led them into the dining room, but he neither seated himself nor asked them to take chairs. The members of the family stared at them, supper for the moment suspended.

"I'll hear your story, young man," Nielsen said. "First, I'll listen to this nonsense about Banderas. Why is he your enemy?"

"It's a long story, but I'll tell it briefly," Jeff answered. "Since he may pay a visit here, I think it would be safer to have the blinds drawn."

The ranchman nodded to his elder daughter. "You—Olga," he said.

Olga went to the window and pulled down the shades. Jeff was a tall man, but as she passed him he noticed that his eyes were level with the heavy braids of yellow hair neatly roped about her head. Never before had he seen a woman who seemed to move with the effortless ease of a deep-breasted Winged Victory.

In a dozen sentences Jeff told the story of his capture by Banderas and his escape from prison. This brought him to his chance contact with the Raleighs, and from that swiftly to his hope of an armistice between them and the more open minded of their enemies.

Hunter felt the intent eyes of all the family upon him as he talked. The father did not once lift his stern gaze from the face of the speaker. Not until the engineer finished did he open his close locked lips.

"First, the man Banderas is a son of Belial," he began. "Neither I nor any of my house have any dealings with him. There is a word in my Bible, 'Thou shalt not kill,' but this man roams the earth, as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. I find still another word in my Bible, and methinks it fits the whole tribe of Raleighs. You will find it in Isaiah. 'Moab shall be trodden down . . . even as straw is trodden down for the dunghill, and He shall spread for His hands in the midst of them, and he that swimmeth spreadeth for his hands to swim; and He shall bring down their pride together with the spoils of their hands."

A smile broke into softer lines the hard face of Hunter. "Well, I was brought up on the Bible myself by a Scotch father, and I think of another verse. 'But He, being full of compassion, forgave their iniquity and destroyed them not: Yea, many a time turned He his anger away, and did not stir up all His wrath.'

"Come, Mr. Nielsen. Since you quote the Bible to me, I assume you mean to be guided by its teachings. The Raleighs are holding out an olive branch. Are you going to reject it, knowing that trouble is about to break loose? Yesterday I saw a fine cow and calf of theirs lying dead, with bullets through their heads. A few hours before one of their camp houses was burned. Today we were attacked. Tomorrow a man will be killed perhaps, and after that many of them. Is there no responsibility on you to try to stop this slaughter?"

"You come to me with blood on your hands," the Norwegian said harshly, "and you preach peace to me."

"They set on us five to two. I could have killed the man I wounded. Another was in our power in the brush and we set him free even while his companions were searching the jungle to rub us out."

"And what would you have me do?" Nielsen asked dourly.

"Talk with your decent neighbors and see if they won't meet the Raleighs half way. If Dave Mallow and those he controls finds out the substantial ranchmen are opposed to their lawlessness it will check their audacity. I'm not asking you to build up support for the Raleighs. Let's first stop this crazy urge to start trouble. After that grievances can be discussed."

Nielsen did not answer at once. The two young men, one about twenty and the other perhaps two years younger, watched Jeff with quiet steadfastness, ready to take any cue their father might give.

The sound of a car came to them. It stopped in the yard, down by the bunkhouse. A sudden quiet, an apprehension close to fear filled the room.

Looking at Hollywood

By Ed Sullivan

Mother's Day in Hollywood.

Hollywood, Cal., May 8.—Mother's day, to be celebrated on Sunday, has a significance all its own to the motion picture colony, because I suppose there are more adopted children out here to the square block than any other community in the U. S. A. It always has seemed to me that the people of the film colony must be blessed singularly because of the hundred or more little tots who have been given homes and affection out here. You can josh a lot of things in Hollywood, but this army of adopted children is a compelling argument in support of the town's human qualities, and Mother's day points it up sharply.

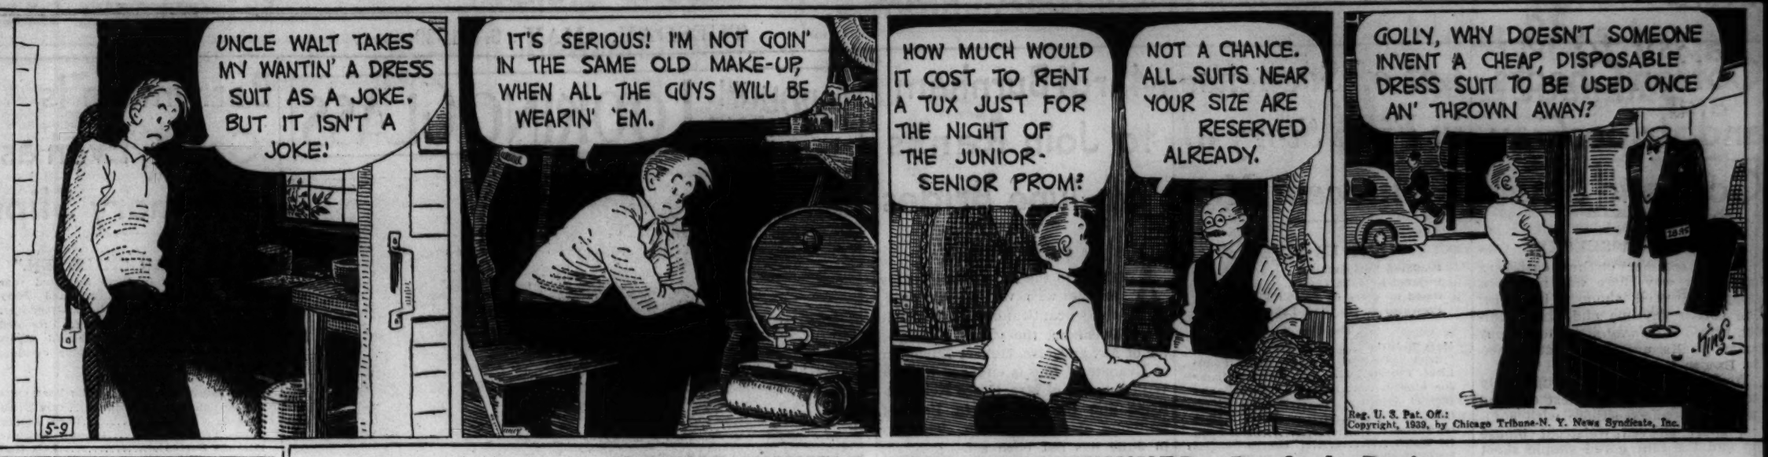
In the final analysis there is nothing more worthwhile than to extend a helping hand to the less fortunate, particularly when the less fortunate is a child—so when Hollywood reaches into orphanage homes and rescues one hundred tots from anonymity, gives them names of distinction, and extends to them the opportunities of fruitful lives the people of the cinema have won a full measure of success in my book.

The nicest homes out here are those in which there is an adopted child. So help me, you sense it when you step over the threshhold, or perhaps you get this feeling because there is a doll sitting on a divan in the living room or a toy dog peers at you from the staircase leading to the nursery.

The reason for this unusual situation in this colony of show people is simply explained. In their early days, when they were hacking out a reputation in vaudeville or in the legitimate theater or on band platforms, the people of the theater weren't in a position to have children of their own or homes of their own. Home was a series of hotels and a series of trains, and they'd rush from the trains to theaters to rehearse. Hollywood, to most of them, was the first permanent stopping place.

Much has been made, and perhaps rightly, of the recurrent waves of divorces in this town, but too little has been made, it seems to me, of this other and more important phase of domestic life. The performers themselves play this down, truly reluctant to exploit it in any fashion, and you seldom see photographs of the children involved. The reason for this is twofold: fear of kidnaping, and a natural fear that mothers of the children will see the pictures, perhaps recognize them, and be made unhappier by that recognition.

GASOLINE ALLEY—HECK!



WINNIE WINKLE, THE BREADWINNER: Brotherly Device

Shorter Skirts in Offing, So Slim the Legs

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Well, if the skirt length is due for another rise, as we hear rumored, there's but one thing to be done about it: acquire the legs for it. There's no other way out. To one of the best in the business, one who has been training figures back to normal for some time, we are sincerely indebted for the following leg and thigh reducing exercises. It's Artie McGovern, who promises you that, with faithful work, these exercises he gives you should bring notable results in two weeks and improvement should be even more rapid thereafter. But if the work is discontinued prematurely, he warns you, the old condition will soon return.

The first three are what Mr. McGovern terms leg limbering exercises:

3. Stand erect, raise the right knee, clasp the hands firmly around it, and pull the knee up as far as possible, keeping your head up and your shoulders and chest back, taking special pains not to let the upper body drop forward.

4. This is quite a difficult squatting exercise. As you squat, let the left leg slide forward and try to sit on your right heel. Allow the hands to rest on the floor for support. This movement is similar to the acrobatic Russian dance step. At the count of one, squat down and allow the left foot to slide forward. You return to starting position and then squat down on the count of two, letting the right foot go forward. Repeat ten times. This exercise may be simplified by placing the hands on two chairs to help in maintaining balance.

5. Get down on all fours, with the weight of the body mostly on the hands, feet slightly apart. Keeping the hands solidly on the floor throughout the exercise, jump with the feet and spread the legs apart; jump again and bring them together. The object is to jump high, spread the legs as far as you can, and bring them together as closely as possible, coming down lightly on the toes. Repeat ten times, counting each time both feet come together.

Mexican Motifs Lend Color to a Luncheon Set

BY NANCY CABOT.

Mexican motifs rank among the most popular embroidery designs for luncheon sets, tray cloths, pillows, and wall hangings. The hot iron transfer pattern for the luncheon set provides six seven-inch figures, plus two narrow borders. These motifs may be placed in the center of a mat or at either end, depending upon individual taste.

For the hot iron transfer pattern of the Mexican luncheon set, No. X-580, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Cornstarch puddings are so easy to make and so inexpensive that it's hard to believe they can be so good to eat. But good they are, if they've been cooked in the double boiler long enough to remove every trace of cornstarchiness. There surely must be a thousand ways to dress up plain blanc mange, or cornstarch pudding, to make it appear like a new dessert. Fruit may be added to it [any kind of fresh, dried, or canned fruit]; it may be topped by any kind of sauce you've a mind to use, or another liquid than milk, say orange juice or coffee, may be used in the recipe.

Blanc Mange [Cornstarch Pudding].
[Serves six.]
¼ cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon vanilla

Mix sugar, salt, and cornstarch. Mix to a paste with ½ cup cold milk. Heat the rest of the milk in the top of a double boiler and add the paste. Cook until thick and smooth in the top of a double boiler, stirring constantly. Or cook until thick over direct heat, stirring constantly, and then place over hot water. Cook mixture 15 or 20 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. The additional cooking is necessary to remove the starchy flavor contributed by cornstarch. Add vanilla and pour into cold, wet molds. Chill until firm. Unmold and serve with chocolate sauce, butterscotch sauce, crushed sweetened strawberries, or other fruit.

An egg may be added to this recipe if desired. Beat it and stir into it a little of the hot pudding which has cooked all but three to five minutes of its total time. Stir the mixture vigorously back into the pudding and remove from heat in about three minutes. Pour into molds as described. The egg makes a little richer pudding, but isn't at all necessary to goodness.

Any of these three sauces makes plain blanc mange into a very special dessert.

Butterscotch Sauce.
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
¼ cup top milk or evaporated milk
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon vanilla

Cook sugar, cream, and butter over medium heat, stirring constantly until sugar is dissolved and mixture bubbles. Add vanilla. Chopped nuts may be added if desired. This sauce is best served warm.

Coffee Sauce.
1 cup clear black coffee
½ cup sugar
3 egg yolks
¼ teaspoon salt

APRICOT OR PRUNE SAUCE.

Use strained apricot or prune pulp, sweeten to taste, and fold in an equal amount of whipped cream.

Prince Olav Gets Honor Degree at St. Olaf College

Northfield, Minn., May 8.—[Special.]—Crown Prince Olav of Norway was given an honorary degree of doctor of laws at St. Olaf college today. It was the highest honor the college could bestow on him. Following the ceremony the crown prince prepared to journey to Rochester, Minn., to visit the Mayo clinic. He planned to join Crown Princess Martha here tonight and board a train for Kansas City.

Indiana Artist Is Given American Academy Prize

New York, May 8.—(AP)—The award to J. Robert McCloskey, 25, of Hamilton, O., of the 1939 painting fellowship of the American academy in Rome was announced here today at the Grand Central Art galleries. The fellowship in sculpture was voted to Robert Pippenger, 27, of Plymouth, Ind.

Child Should Learn Dignity of All Labor

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

A generation or so ago almost every one thought that an artist had to go to Europe—especially to Paris—to learn to paint, draw, or do sculpture, not only for good teachers, but for atmosphere, Quartier Latin, soft black ties and, possibly, beards.

Now, thank heaven, our artists know that is not necessary. They not only know that one can learn to paint here [many of our great artists never have been abroad] but that this country is rich in material for artists to portray and interpret. And many of our leading men are finding interest not only in America's past but in her present. Go to some of our exhibits of modern art and you will see everyday things depicted in a way to make you open your eyes.

Miners at work in the tunnels; factory workers, weary and bent, returning from their work; children dancing in the street to a hurdy gurdy; turbines or fly wheels or generating plants all are considered worthy subjects for our best artists. The economic situation has reinstated the dignity of all work. No matter what kind it is, labor is honorable and a part of man's inheritance.

There is the young boy who has had to postpone his entrance into college while he earns the wherewithal to enter by driving a laundry truck. His mother used to weep as she saw him leave in the morning for work instead of study. But now she is proud of him and is canvassing on her own to help him.

If you are of the white collar class or are on the upper rungs of the ladder financially, are you sure that your attitude, not only the surface attitude, but your inner feeling, is one that all and any kind of honest work is honorable, that those of us who labor with our hands are doing as worth while work as those of us who work with our minds?

This thought is especially important for parents to dwell upon, whose boys and girls are not interested in a profession or business as a career.

"Understanding the Adolescent" is the name of a booklet sent out on request. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

Elect Nine to Highest Court of Methodists

Kansas City, Mo., May 8.—(AP)—Delegates uniting this nation's three branches of Methodism elected the nine members of the judicial council or "supreme court" of their new church today. The delegates rejected a suggestion that they substitute the word "cup" for "wine" in their communion ritual.

Opposing the ritual substitution proposed by Chester A. Smith, New York lay delegate, Dr. Daniel L. Marsh of Boston university said "all the delegates feel as does Brother Smith about alcohol—they hate it," but the conference should not attempt "to edit" the ceremony on such short notice.

The change would have altered the ritual to read "the bread and the cup," that, said Dr. Marsh, would mix figures of speech and if the first proposal carried the ritual should be changed further to read "the plate and the cup."

Three of the fifty-one nominees won a clear majority of the 777 votes cast on the first ballot.

They are the Rev. Francis R. Bayley of Baltimore, North church minister and chairman of the Uniting conference judiciary committee; the Rev. J. Stewart French, Bristol, Tenn., South church minister and secretary of that branch's judicial council, and Martin E. Lawson, Liberty, Mo., layman and chairman of the South Church Judicial council.

On the second ballot, the following were elected: The Rev. George R. Brown, Liberty, N. C., Methodist Protestant minister; H. R. Van Deusen, Scranton, Pa., Methodist North layman. Vincent Paul Clark, Winchester, Mass., Methodist North layman; M. A. Childers, San Antonio, Tex., Methodist South church layman.

Chosen on the third ballot were: The Rev. W. G. Henry, Atlanta, a presiding elder of the South church. The Rev. Walter C. Buckner, Los Angeles, a district superintendent of the North church.

Simple, Adaptable Pattern

WOMAN'S AND MISS' FROCK.

This simple pattern adapts itself to many fabrics and many moods. If you're in business or in school you will like the version at the right in silk or cotton, preferably in a print or dotted material. If you need a frock strictly for the home some inexpensive cotton will fashion a frock like that at the left, which is styled especially well for the mature figure.

The house dress design has a V neckline with contrasting collar that matches the cuffs on the puffed sleeves. The frock in this version needs no belt because it is paneled to fit. Two capacious pockets may be used on the skirt and buttons are used all the way down the front.

The more detailed frock has a stitched collar, stitched triangles that pass for pockets, stitched cuffs and belt. Buttons are arranged in groups for striking effect.

Style No. 2745 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20, and 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measurement.

Clotilde patterns are 10 cents each. Address orders to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be sure to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Musical Guild Winners Give Double Debut

BY EDWARD BARRY.

This year the Musical guild chose Constance Clare, pianist, and Shirley Evans, cellist, for the honor of a professional début under its auspices. Both were presented in Kimball hall last night.

In Chopin's F-sharp nocturne and A-flat ballade Miss Clare made her instrument sing naturally and movingly. Each nuance of feeling in the music seemed to find its own expression in a finely reticent rubato here, an intoxicating change of coloring there. The same was true of a Siloti transcription of a Scriabine poeme, the Bauer version of a fragrant Franck pastorale, and the quite un-Litszlike F-minor étude.

The Brahms G-minor ballade suffered somewhat through overly violent accents which the line of the music could not assimilate and which rendered the piece static rather than mobile. However, that rare theme in B in the middle was nicely delivered. In the Bach-Busoni D-major prelude and fugue a noble conception on the part of the performer encountered difficulties in the way of too great a striving for sonority and too free a use of the damper pedal.

Because Miss Evans' tone is shot with light and because her phrasing has an extraordinary eloquence her listeners entirely escaped that doped feeling which cello playing so often induces.

That straining and striving in the Lalo excerpt was probably the fault of the composer rather than the performer. The Eccles sonata, the Chopin nocture [transcribed by Piatigorsky], and that encore whose name we almost but not quite knew—all of these were distinguished by finely handled details of tempo and color, and by an authority which suggested that the performer had the end of a phrase in mind before she essayed its very first note.

Miss Carr to Give Address at Rockford College Class

Rockford, Ill., May 8.—[Special.]—Miss Charlotte Carr, director of Hull house, Chicago, will be the commencement speaker at Rockford college on Monday, June 12. Miss Carr was to have given an address at the Rockford Charter day ceremonies in February, but was prevented by illness from speaking.

Women Voters Hear Plea to Stop Spending

Urbana, Ill., May 8.—[Special.]—Mr. Business Man and Mr. Average Citizen today called on government to balance the budget as the only means of bringing back prosperity. They overruled Mr. New Dealer in a three way discussion of public spending at the Illinois League of Women Voters' eighteenth annual convention here. R. M. Nolan, H. K. Allen, and H. M. Gray of the economics department of the University of Illinois respectively presented these points of view.

Speaking for the average citizen, Mr. Allen termed "balancing the budget a necessity." Adding that there is a limit to the credit even of the United States government, and "unfortunately none knows when the breakdown will occur until it happens."

Mr. Nolan, the business man's spokesman, asserted that government spending has destroyed the confidence of business men and investors. Unless the budget is balanced, taxes reduced, and government restrictions relaxed, there can be no business recovery, he said.

Claiming that every one favors the budget "in principle," Mr. Gray, as spokesman for the New Deal, suggested dividing the federal budget into two parts. The "operating" part, to include relief, is to be balanced. The "investment" portion, to include such projects as the TVA, "need not balance because it yields revenue."

Mrs. Henry P. Chandler of Chicago, executive secretary of the Illinois board of public welfare commissioners, said "the league's three point program is the answer to the St. Charles problem.

As explained by Mrs. Florence Fifer Bohrer, the program would remove all dependent children from St. Charles. "Boys dangerous to society" would be confined elsewhere. St. Charles would be manned with competent personnel free from "political control."

City Opera Launches Drive for Guarantors; Seek Total of $50,000

The Chicago City Opera company's board of governors met at the Chicago club yesterday to launch a campaign for a $50,000 guaranty fund. The campaign is to run for one month and will be conducted by the executive committee, Robert Hall McCormick, Albert N. Williams, Fred A. Poor, L. E. Block, Laurence H. Armour, and Hill Blackett.

Mr. McCormick said that it is probable that guarantors would be asked for only a percentage of their pledge. He explained that deficits of the last three years have averaged $24,000.

According to CULBERTSON

[Copyright: 1939: By Ely Culbertson.]

Bridge players can be divided sharply into two groups: underbidders and overbidders. Of course this generality must be qualified by taking into consideration those chameleonlike players who underbid on Tuesdays, Fridays, and Sundays, and overbid on the other days. [The number of accurate bidders is so pitifully small that in taking a census we need not bother our heads about them.]

The chronic overbidder, strangely enough, is not always one of those ebullient souls who trip blithely through life, expecting heaven to protect them; he is just as apt to be a Gloomy Gus in private life, confining his orgies of optimism to the bridge table. And the habitual underbidder is not necessarily a sweet old lady who shudders at the somewhat anomalous word "vulnerable." It is just as apt to be a "he" who played full back on the varsity, but who cannot bring himself to a good, rousing bid on less than six honor tricks and ten winners.

This lengthy and perhaps irrelevant dissertation brings us to the following hand and the extremely vigorous bidding of the North player.

Match-point duplicate.
North-South vulnerable.

SOUTH
♠ A 10 9 4 3

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
3 spades	Pass	4 no trump	Pass
5 diamonds	Pass	6 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

Before I say what I think of North's bidding it is only fair to admit that South's opening bid was a trifle shaded. Nevertheless, I hasten to add, I am completely in sympathy with these light bids—particularly when the bidder is vulnerable. This statement may surprise many readers, but if they will examine further into the entire philosophy of bidding they will see the logic of it. If a player is not vulnerable he can often afford to pass questionable holdings with the expectation, or at least the hope, of entering the auction at a higher level. But when he is vulnerable he dare not plan any such thing. The danger of shading values slightly to make an opening one-bid is nothing like as great as the danger of entering the arena for the first time at the two or three level. In sum, then, the vulnerable bidder must decide between opening a light hand and being shut out of the bidding entirely. When nonvulnerable this fear does not loom as large.

Now let us get at North's horrible performance. It is true that he had four honor tricks, but his heart suit was very weak. Hence, when he made a jump takeout to three hearts, he expressed, or at least implied, in that one bid all the values of his hand, including the excellent fit for partner's suit. When South could do no more than rebid his spades [virtually forced under the circumstances, since he did not want to bid no trump with a singleton heart] North should have contented himself with a raise to four spades. If there were to be any further slam efforts they would have to come from South. The four no trump [North-South were using the Blackwood convention] was in itself overly ambitious. The following jump to six spades, after South had shown one ace with his five diamond response, was beyond the pale.

Needless to say, the contract was not fulfilled. South would have had to find a remarkable lay of cards to bring it home and this time was not that lucky.

Tomorrow's Hand

Mr. Culbertson will discuss this hand in tomorrow's column.

Write your bridge troubles and problems to Ely Culbertson, care of The Tribune, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

The Housewife

The problem of dressing the narrow, ugly window to make it look wide and nicely proportioned has been solved neatly and efficiently by a manufacturer of curtain rods. There is now an extender rod called a hand-traverse drapery extender rod that turns the trick. It extends beyond the window frame, curving to meet the wall and it is attached to the frame in two places so it is perfectly firm. It "stretches" from 18 to 28 inches each side.

You simply hang your draperies by means of little hooks and slides which come with the rods, then push them back so that they partly cover the window frame and the wall, too.

New York, May 8.—The Cubs finally won a baseball game today, but that ol' debbil trouble which has been annoying the champions ever since they left Chicago bobbed up when Phil Cavarretta suffered a fractured ankle in the second inning. The Cubs went on from there to beat the Giants, 4 to 2, with capable pitching by Big Bill Lee and even more effective hitting by the southern gentleman.

Wire Bone Into Place.

A large piece of the bone was displaced a quarter of an inch and late tonight was wired back into place by Dr. David Bosworth, expert on such matters. Estimates placed Cavarretta's impending span of inactivity at five weeks.

Phil had been restored to the lineup in right field after Manager Gabby Hartnett's Sunday blast in which he benched Capt. Billy Herman, Hank Leiber, and Joe Marty. Herman was restored to good standing today when Hartnett let him bat in the ninth inning for Steve Mesner, who had supplanted the captain.

Herman Returns to Lineup.

Hartnett, probably just from force of habit, announced another new lineup for the final game of the series tomorrow. Herman will be back at second base and Carl Reynolds will take Cavarretta's vacated right field post. Glen Russell, the Pacific coast league rookie, is the only bona fide first baseman left. In event he is benched or incapacitated, Stan Hack will move to first base and Hank Leiber, the clean-up hitting center fielder now doing a stretch on the bench, will play third base. The new batting order follows:

Mr. Lee Turns Slugger.

While the Cubs achieved the third victory of the season for Lee, all but Big Bill were pretty well cooled off offensively after a three run splurge against Hal Schumacher in the third inning.

Lee scored the first and tying Cub run after opening the third with a single and he socked a homer for the fourth and last Chicago run in the third. Big Bill singled off Bill Lohrman in the sixth for the only Cub hit after the fourth inning.

The game, though a defeat which threw the Giants back into a tie with the Cubs, was of importance to New York fans for the great Carl Hubbell did his first National league pitching since last Aug. 23. He retired the Cubs in order in the last two innings, striking out Lee and Dick Bartell, last two Cubs to face him.

Bartell made his first appearance

In the Wake of the News

BY ARCH WARD.

JACK RUSSELL, veteran American and National league pitcher, now with the Cubs, as a semi-pro in his native Texas frequently played against bloomer girl teams. . . . He says the best woman player he ever has seen was a first baseman who chewed a package of scrap tobacco during an afternoon's pastiming. . . . The Daro brothers, California wrestling promoters who blew the whistle on alleged chiselers in Los Angeles, are said to be dickering for a piece of the wrestling racket in Philadelphia, one of the few major cities which still tolerates wrestling on a big scale. . . . And even Philly is calming down. . . . It soon will become illegal for one workman to throw another out of the ring there. . . . What fun will there be attending a match without the experience of brushing an occasional 200 pounder off your lap. . . . The Cincinnati Red Stockings scored fifty-six consecutive victories between March of 1869 and June, 1870. . . . On June 14, 1870, they were defeated by the Atlantics of Brooklyn, 8 to 7, in eleven innings. . . . Dick McCann, Yankee scout, once was fined $200 while playing with Minneapolis because the manager thought he had broken the club's no late hours rule, whereas he actually had risen early to attend church services. . . . Gabby Hartnett suffers as much over reverses as his predecessor, Charley Grimm, but in a different way. . . . Gabby stays on the ground floor for his brooding. . . . Charley used to stare all night out of twenty story windows.

Jack Russell.

Joe Louis predicts he will have less trouble with Tony Galento than he did with Jack Roper. . . . It might save a lot of trouble if the promoters would wire Tony the loser's end of the purse and call the whole thing off. . . . Lynn Myers, Cardinal infielder, is one of the major league's smallest players. . . . He is 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 145 pounds. . . . This is baseball's centennial year, but it actually is the National league's 64th and the American's 39th. . . . Sid Richardson, Northwestern golf captain and Big Ten champion, has qualified for three national amateur championships. . . . Billy Patterson, the Bears' new quarter back from Baylor, insists everything that has been said about the All-American attributes of Ki Aldrich, Texas Christian center signed by the Cardinals, can be doubled in spades.

Never Trust a Poet.

Never trust a poet
Who grinds the grain of truth—
Give love, and he will throw it
Away, like coins of youth.
Never let a moment
Be taken for its rhyme—
A poet's soul in foment
Is apt to banish time.
O, never give a poet
The kernel of your heart!
He'll grind it fine, and stow it
As stardust for his art.

DYKES DISCOVERS NEW STAR; SMITH TRIMS YANKS, 5-3

Yields Only 7 Hits, Drives In Winning Runs.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

James Dykes' White Sox have a new phenom, at least for the moment. He's a pitching, hitting southpaw named Edgar Smith, imported last week from the Athletics and introduced to the world champion New York Yankees yesterday. His debut as a pitcher was sensational, but he made it doubly thrilling for 6,000 partisans by first figsting off fielding treachery in his own ranks and then booming forth an eighth inning single which scored two runs and elevated the Sox to victory, 5 to 3.

Smith's only serious troubles during the afternoon came from Frankie Crosetti and Luke Appling, each wearing different uniforms but seemingly joined in an anti-Smith crusade. Crosetti did his part with a first inning homer on a 3 and 2 pitch. What the champions accomplished thereafter wasn't the results of their few hits, but because of unexpected aid from Appling. The Sox shortstop, who usually goes along on even keel, booted two plays. A run resulted from each error, creating the tie that Smith finally shattered with his single.

Ferrell Gets Generous.

The buildup for Smith's hitting heroics began in the eighth when old Wes Ferrell, pitching to save his job, let Appling walk. It was the seventh pass issued by the one time fiery right hander, who had done right well after the Sox had dented him for three runs in the first two innings, one of which also was driven in by Smith. There was a pass for Larry Rosenthal after Eric McNair had sacrificed. Also a pass for Mike Tresh after Mike Kreevich had popped to Joe Gordon. And then Smith stepped up. He almost knocked the shoes off Ferrell with a line drive which skipped into center field for a single and sent Appling and Rosenthal home.

Smith's introduction was made all the more impressive by the manner in which he squirmed out of difficult situations. After the Crossetti homer in the first, there were two on bases with only one out. He got away. The Yanks put three batters on bases in the third, but didn't score. He wasn't disturbed by a pass with none out in the fourth. Both of Appling's blunders were with none out, one following a pass, yet these misteps netted only two runs. In the last two innings Smith's speed ball and curve functioned perfectly. The Yanks didn't see first base.

The Yankees started in the fashion

Man the Tees! Tribune Free Golf School Opens Tonight

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The seventh annual free golf school conducted by THE TRIBUNE, the largest system of group instruction the game ever has seen, will open tonight on the four courses of the Chicago park district. Members of the Illinois section of the Professional Golfers' Association of America, who have volunteered their services, will begin a series of four lessons in which they will teach all golf minded citizens, regardless of age or ability, the A B C's of golf.

The same lesson will be given simultaneously on all of the four courses, beginning promptly at 7 p. m. Each lesson will last approximately an hour. After tonight's initial lesson, the second lesson on all courses will be given Thursday night, the third on May 16, and the fourth and last of the regular series on May 18.

Teach Proper Grip.

Tonight's lesson, in accordance with the rule of simplicity which governs the school, will be devoted to the grip, the first portion of the golfing alphabet. All golfers who plan to attend tonight's opening class are advised to study the story on the grip appearing in these columns.

The Illinois section of the P. G. A. indicated yesterday at the second session of its educational clinic in the Morrison hotel that it is willing to make this seventh Tribune school the biggest in its history.

Diversey—Diversey boulevard at the lake.

Entrance examinations are the rule at the average college and university. Not so with The Tribune golf school. The only requirements for enrollment are one golf club and your presence at the course most convenient to you.

Everyone's Invited.

The pattern of the school is simplicity itself. After tonight's lesson on the grip, the stance will be taken up Thursday, with the swing up for dissection in the concluding two lessons on May 16 and 18.

During the first six years of the school, more than 125,000 men, women and children have taken the free lessons. The system has been a model for a hundred similar undertakings elsewhere. The Illinois section of the P. G. A., a pioneer in group instruction and the educational side of the game, as reflected in its present clinic, has been the biggest factor in making the school a success.

The four head teachers in the

BE SPORTSMEN, CONSUL TELLS CHICAGO'S FOES

Invaders Near Peak for Friday Show.

BY STEWART OWEN.

The four Italian members of the all-European boxing team put themselves on record officially yesterday with promises to win their bouts against their Chicago opponents in the eighth international Golden Gloves contest in Chicago Stadium Friday night.

They made their pledges to Dr. Franco Fontana, Italian consul general, on a visit to the consulate at 201 North Wells street, yesterday morning.

Dr. Fontana in welcoming the boys to Chicago emphasized that they are here as the representatives of Italy and that it is incumbent upon them to uphold the prestige of their native land as fighters but above all else as good sportsmen.

Calls for Good Sportsmanship.

"You must do your best to win," Dr. Fontana said, "but whether you win or lose above all else you must show good sportsmanship in the ring. You must do nothing that would detract from the good name and the prestige of Italy as a nation of fair-minded sportsmen."

He asked Guido Nardecchia, the bantamweight, what he expected to do in the ring.

"I will win," said Guido. He said it not boastfully but simply as a promise.

Egisto Peire, the lightweight, and Nemesio Lazzari, the heavyweight, added their promises to that of their teammate. Luigi Musina, the light heavyweight champion of Europe, was unwontedly modest in the presence of the consul.

"I will do my best," he said. "I think I will win."

Luigi's Modesty Astounding.

The simplicity and modesty of Luigi's statement was a little surprising to his teammates. They have grown so accustomed to his swaggering that anything but a swashbuckling attitude on his part was breathtaking.

"Musina is nuts," said Nardecchia, "but Musina will win."

Luigi showed, however, that the rôle of modesty was assumed only for the official visit when he stepped into the ring of the Medinah club gymnasium for his afternoon drill. There he was the same fancy stepping, dashing Musina, shooting rights and lefts at his colored sparring partner and rushing him about the ring so viciously for two rounds that Trainer Steve Klaus tried in vain to slow him down.

After two rounds the light heavyweight sparring partner was replaced by a faster middleweight, who was instructed to keep out of the way of Musina's punches. It was good advice, but Musina counteracted it by stepping up his pace to that of the fresh opponent and walloping him as he had the slower, heavier boxer.

Lazzari Shows Power, Speed.

Klaus tried the same strategy on Lazzari's three round workout. When a heavyweight showed symptoms of succumbing to the Italian blacksmith's sledge hammer blows near the end of the second round, a lighter, faster man was sent into the ring. Lazzari, who is surprisingly fast for his great bulk, kept right after the smaller man, pursuing him around the ring and landing his punches with just as great frequency.

Eric Agren, the Swedish welterweight champion, had to be excused after two rounds of slugging. His opponents have been complaining to Klaus that Agren fights too hard and that they are getting tired of being knocked through the ropes. Agren, like Anton Raadik, the middleweight champion of Europe, never stops fighting from bell to bell and never gets enough action. In Stockholm, when he isn't in the ring himself Agren is training other members of his amateur boxing club and the student boxing team of the Technological university.

Raadik's schedule in the ring was

Boston, Mass., May 8.—(AP)—Pirate Pitcher Jim Tobin, stepping to the plate in the ninth inning with two out and Pittsburgh and Boston tied, 2 to 2, lined out a double today to score Lee Handley and win his own game, 3 to 2. It was Boston's fifth consecutive setback.

Handley had doubled off Freddie Frankhouse, who pitched the last inning and who was charged with the defeat. Tobin yielded five hits.

PHILLIES BEAT REDS.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 8.—(AP)—Those fighting Phillies came up with a five run rally in the eighth inning today to knock Johnny Vander Meer out of the box and beat the first place Cincinnati Reds, 8 to 7.

in which they had conducted themselves on Sunday. Crosetti led off with his home run into the lower left field pavilion and statisticians promptly discovered it was his first homer since the one with which he helped to wreck Diz Dean in the last world series.

The Sox retrieved the run in their half on an irreducible minimum of hitting. Ferrell began his day's labor by passing Radcliff, who immediately stole second. A slow teaser bounced toward short by Owen eluded Crosetti for a single, Radcliff going to third. Walker supplied a long fly to Henrich and Radcliff scored.

So Go Ahead.

A bunt which Rosenthal beat out started the Sox on the road to their two runs in the second inning. The Yanks didn't anticipate such trickery. It caused Ferrell so much grief that he walked Kreevich. Tresh feinted at one pitch as if intending to bunt and then crossed up the champions with a full swing which netted a single to right, Rosenthal scoring and Kreevich going to third. Smith grounded to Rolfe, who preferred to try for the double play. His throw to Gordon forced Tresh at second, but there wasn't time to double Smith at first, Kreevich scoring.

Thornton Lee, the left hander who whipped the Yanks three times but lost five to them last season, will pitch for the White Sox today in the final of the series. The Yankees' pitching will be looked after by Oral Hildebrand or Vernon [Lefty] Gomez.

Ken Silvestri had recovered yesterday from his "fever," as it was called, but Jack Hayes picked up the ailment and went home. This inspired Manager Dykes to remark, "The next guy who goes to a doctor without my consent will be plastered with a fine."

Jocko Conlan, former White Sox outfielder now umpiring in the American association, spent an off day watching the Sox and Yanks. Conlan worked a couple games in which Harry Boyles, property of the White Sox, was the pitcher and was favorably impressed. Boyles is at St. Paul under option.

A New Sox—and a Winner!

Cavarretta's Ankle Broken; Cubs Win, 4-2

since he was seized with some sort of ailment after running out a fly in the second inning of the Brooklyn opener last Thursday. Bartell played with alacrity, but pulled his batting average down to .211 with five failures in his new leadoff rôle.

Cavarretta Hurt in Slide.

Whatever satisfaction the Cubs may have derived from developing a threat in the second inning was wiped out by the injury to Cavarretta. Gleeson led off with the first of his hits, but was out trying to steal second. Hartnett fanned, but Cavarretta singled to right. Phil stole second and, as he slid into the bag, injured his ankle. Time was called as Phil squirmed in agony until members of both teams surrounded him. When play was resumed Reynolds ran for Phil. G. Russell walked, but Schumacher speared Mesner's drive and threw him out.

Less lost control in the home second, but the Cubs managed to hold the New Yorkers to a run. Ott and Bonura walked, then Seeds hit into a double play. Demaree singled to left, scoring Ott.

And here's the record of the Cubs' big third: Lee singled, lingered while Bartell and Hack supplied outs and stopped at second on the first of Galan's hits, a single to left. Gleeson smacked his second single, scoring Lee and putting Galan on third. Gleeson got to second when Whitehead dropped Seeds' return. Hartnett was given an intentional pass, filling the bases. Reynolds singled to center, scoring Galan and Gleeson.

Herman to Phils or Cardinals, 'Tis Whispered

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 8.—Yesterday's Cub shakeup, especially in so far as it affected Bill Herman, brought the expected New York flood of trade rumors, especially since Branch Rickey of the St. Louis Cardinals is in town. Most logical rumor, however, named Herman in a deal with the Phils which would bring either Pitcher Claude Passeau or Pitcher Hugh Mulcahy to the Cubs.

Little Sir Echo brought tidings out of the Cub clubhouse meeting last evening. According to Sir Echo, Manager Gabby Hartnett delivered one of the most sulphurous tirades ever loosed in a baseball bathhouse. There hasn't been anything like it on the Cubs since the late Bill Veeck used to drop in on the boys when they seemed to be getting out of hand.

CARACAS, Venezuela, May 8.—(AP)—Baby Oriental, Cuban boxer, was reported dead today after being knocked out last night by Freddie Miller of Cincinnati, but he lived to deny the report.

It was reported this morning that Oriental had died after an emergency operation, but a later investigation revealed he had been transferred to his room after treatment and no operation had been performed. He was declared out of danger today.

GOLDEN GLOVERS BEGIN TAPERING OFF IN DRILL

Heavyweight Ott Is Only Casualty.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Chicago's Golden Gloves boxers, fighting for the eight positions on the team that will meet the champions of Europe Friday night in the Stadium, passed the peak of their training activities yesterday in the Illinois Athletic club with seventeen members of the squad sparring three rounds of three minutes each.

This afternoon the American boys will box two rounds each in addition to floor work, and tomorrow they will complete this phase of training with one round each. On Thursday, the day before the international matches, all will unlimber with gymnastic exercises and shadow boxing, and then mark time until the weighing in the following afternoon, at which time the personnel of the team will be announced.

The squad will be tentatively selected Wednesday, but should any one fail to make weight, an alternate will be ready to step in.

Ott Only Casualty.

Orlan Ott, the big heavyweight from Sioux City, Ia., now is the only serious casualty on the Chicago squad. Ott injured his left elbow when he accidentally bumped it against the edge of a chair, aggravating an injury received in football a year ago. It is unlikely he will be in condition to box against Altus Allen any time this week. This means, of course, that Allen will represent Chicago in the bout against Nemesio Lazzari of Italy, but Allen already proved his superiority over Ott and he probably would have been the coaches' choice regardless of Ott's injury.

Jimmy Reeves of Cleveland, Golden Gloves and National A. A. U. light heavyweight champion, is another of the squad who definitly will fight Friday night. Reeves may be selected in the middleweight division, however, if he makes that weight. He never has been more than a few pounds over the middleweight limit of 160 pounds. If Reeves' weight doesn't warant selection as a middleweight, he will take his usual position as light heavyweight.

Reeves Looks Good.

Reeves fought three rounds yesterday with Pete Hantz of East Moline, Ill., to decide whether the change should be made on the basis of comparative ability. And after the bout the coaches were still desirous of matching Reeves with Anton Raadik of Estonia, the European middleweight. This change would leave Ragon Kinney of Arkansas Tech, to represent Chicago in the 175 pound division against Luigi Musina of Milan, Italy.

The coaches' selections in the first five weight divisions still are a matter of conjecture. Vic Saccoia of Detroit, Golden Gloves flyweight champion, and Willie Moon of Chicago, continue nearly on a par. Olli Lehtinen of Finland, will be the opponent. The bantamweight scrap between Earl Reid of Benton Harbor, Mich., and Chester Ellis of Kansas City, the champion, has been equally close with Ellis having a slight advantage because of his endurance. On Saturday and again yesterday, Ellis was the stronger in the third round.

Two Boys Disappoint.

Neither Tony Ancana of Detroit nor Homer Williams, Chicago, have reached the form they displayed in the Tournament of Champions and the finals two months ago. Their showing has been discouraging to the coaches, so much so that Ellis may be shifted to the featherweight class to fight Paddy Dowdall of Dublin. And to complicate the selection further, Roy Lewis of Muncie, Ind., who has been listed as a lightweight, now finds he can bring his weight down to 126 pounds. He may be named for this berth.

Until this year, Lewis fought as a featherweight, but moved to the lightweight class for the Tournament of Champions. His weight generally is four pounds under that limit, and because of his diligent training he's within striking division of the 126 pound limit. Lewis is one of the hardest working lads on the squad, anxious to get a chance in the international fights. His left hand style also may bother Dowdall.

Jones Having Trouble.

Johnny Pleasant, the only Chicago boxer to win a Golden Gloves title this year, quite likely will be the lightweight representative on the international squad. Pleasant, if named, will meet Egisto Peire of Italy. Johnny is regarded as one of the best boxers on the squad. Milton Jones of St. Louis, the welterweight champion, is the only boy who appears to be in danger of failing to make required weight. He failed to qualify for the National A. A. U. meet in San Francisco, being overweight, and he still is having difficulty getting down to 147 pounds. Vernell Williams of the Gary, Ind., team and William Pauli of Detroit are the other welterweights. Pauli has looked very good during training.

The uniforms for the international team will be delivered today. All the boys will receive outfits regardless of whether the are chosen to fight.

Excellent seats in all price sections remain for the show Friday night, the eighth international boxing show sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. These tickets may be purchased at the public service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and in the lobby of Tribune Tower.

Anglers Deal Out Tags to Game Tarpon

BY BOB BECKER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Useppa Island, Fla., May 8.—There's a 50 pound tarpon swimming in Boca Grande pass today with a narrow metal band on it bearing the following letters: 10491 U S B F—T. We caught and tagged this hard fighting fish last night in Boca Grande pass.

The letters "U S B F" on the metal tag which we clamped into the right gill cover or opercle of the fish stand for "United States Bureau of Fisheries," the agency that supervises the banding of many different kinds of fish in the United States. The "T" on the band is for The Tribune. The number on the tag is from the records of Marshall B. Bishop of Peabody museum, the scientist who is investigating the habits of the west coast tarpon and has tagged several thousand small ones this spring.

Anglers Help in Tagging.

Anglers and guides are helping Bishop in the tagging of tarpon of hook and line size, and practically every fishing boat cruising these waters has a supply of tags aboard.

Our 50 pounder grabbed a live crab bait at exactly 11:55 p. m. on the kind of a night for which the tarpon fisherman prays—a soft, warm evening, bright moonlight, a low water slack tide shortly after midnight and the fish hitting for several hours.

We were drifting through the pass along with 30 other brightly lighted fishing boats when the tarpon paid us a visit. We felt a heavy pull on the line as the 8 ounce lead sinker went toward the bottom. Although we were doing a little moon gazing at the time, admiring the beauty and the novelty of the big fishing fleet milling around in the moonlight, we quickly struck the fish hard and then called to our guide, Floyd, to "take it away."

Head for Open Water.

He headed the boat out of the fishing fleet toward open water, a couple of boats backed away to let us through, the tarpon rushed out with 40 or 50 yards of line and then come the big thrill . . . the sight of this gleaming fish leaping in the moonlight. Once out in the open we settled down to whipping the fish. We pumped it in only to see it make another rush and a leap. Five times this game tarpon leaped before we were able to bring it alongside, exactly 15 minutes from the time it was hooked.

The guide picked up his releasing hook, a large gaff-like instrument which holds a fish without hurting it. With this instrument the guide held the tarpon's head out of the water while we slipped the small metal tag on his gill cover and fastened it to the outer edge with a pair of pliers. This took not more than five seconds. The tarpon slipped back into the water and dove under the boat a free, but marked, fish.

Italian Boxers Pledge Golden Glove Victory

the same as Musina's and Lazzari's, a fresh opponent being selected for the third round to enable him to go at top speed for the entire match. Olli Lehtinen, the Finnish flyweight, and Nardecchia revealed themselves as surprisingly hard punchers for such little fellows in their three round workouts. Lehtinen's opponent, Arthur Ellis, who had boxed with the Finn twice before, elected to slug yesterday as the first round started. Olli took to the idea warmly and tore into Ellis with a wallop that carried the power of a much heavier man, and kept it up for three rounds.

Dowdall Craves Action.

Paddy Dowdall, the Irish featherweight, who battled his way to the championship of all Europe, wound up yesterday afternoon's boxing drill with three rounds, and was willing to go a couple more if Klaus had permitted it. Dowdall is in a class with Agren and Raadik in his love for fighting. Reared in a tough section of Dublin where street fighting was the principal pastime of the neighborhood boys, Paddy has been fighting practically all his life.

The European team took its customary roadwork in Lake Shore playground yesterday morning but will pass it up today. The boys will box again this afternoon and wind up their intensive drills tomorrow afternoon. Only light workouts will be held Thursday.

Michigan State Loses in Track to Penn State

East Lansing, Mich., May 8.—[Special.]—Penn State's track team won the second meet of its midwestern invasion today, defeating Michigan State, 74 to 57. The Nittany Lions captured firsts in eleven events, while the Spartans won four.

Eleven records were broken, nine of them meet marks. Walter Arrington, Spartan colored star, bettered the meet, field, and varsity record for the broad jump when he cleared 24 feet 3¼ inches. Arrington also won the high jump.

Nick Vukmanic, weight man, led Penn State with firsts in the shot put, discus, and javelin, breaking the meet record in the shot. Capt. Miller Frasier of the Lions won both hurdle races and William Sutton, dash man, took the 100 and 220 yard dash events.

Today's victory enabled Penn State to maintain its unbeaten season record in dual competition.

SHORELINE RIDING CLUB Votes Meister Bräu First Choice . . . 37 to 6

When horseback riding enthusiasts were asked to taste Meister Bräu bottled beer and to compare it with other brands, at the Shoreline Riding Club, 1330 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, 6 out of every 7 said, "I prefer this to any other bottled beer."

Independent Investigator Sets Out to Explain Amazing Popularity

When beer retailers were asked by Chicago Newspapers what brand of bottled beer leads in sales, they reported Meister Bräu. Figures ranged from 2 to 1 leadership to as high as 10 to 1. The Reuben H. Donnelley Corporation was asked to check and analyze this amazing popularity by holding taste-and-compare tests where groups of men and women gather.

The investigator finds that the true old-time flavor of Meister Bräu explains its tremendous popularity, and that Chicagoans appreciate the all-grain flavor which Richard Seibold, Meister Bräu Brewmaster, preserves by refusing to add sugars or syrups to the brew, or to change his method of bottling with natural draft-beer carbonation, only.

TONIGHT'S GOLF LESSON, PUPILS, IS ON THE GRIP

Pros Will Give You A of Game's A, B, C's.

Tonight's first lesson in the Tribune's sixth annual free Tribune golf school will be devoted to the grip. All students are requested to read the following suggestions on this fundamental, so that they may have a preliminary understanding of the lesson when their teachers begin the actual instruction.

With the head of the club on the ground in the normal golfing position, the left hand is to a degree over the top of the shaft; the left thumb is on the right side of the shaft; the V formed by the thumb and forefinger points toward the right shoulder, and at least two knuckles of the left fist are visible.

The club is held not entirely in the fingers nor entirely in the palm, but lies diagonally across the hand. And it is a combination palm and finger grip with the main pressure exerted by the three smallest fingers. This method produces firmness and permits wrist freedom.

When extended, the right hand should parallel the face of the club. Not more than one knuckle of the fist is visible, and the V formed by thumb and forefinger points toward the right shoulder.

The club is not held in the palm, since this would restrict wrist action. It is almost entirely a finger grip, with slightly more pressure exerted by the first finger.

You may have noticed that a great majority of players use the overlapping grip, in which the little finger of the right hand is placed either directly on top of the first finger of the left hand, or between the first and second fingers. The purpose of this grip is to unite the hands so that they wil work together and prevent their separation during the swing. This is the most popular type, although the plain grip, where all fingers of both hands are on the shaft, may be used to advantage by people with unusually short fingers or small hands.

VAST DEATH RAYS IN SKY REVEALED BY ASTRONOMERS

New Telescope in Texas Uncovers Secrets.

Instead of constellations, astronomers now detect such things as death rays millions of miles long, highways where stars travel to and fro, dusty sky deserts, a special continent of stars near the earth, and light that does not come from stars.

Surprisingly Vast Clouds.

The latest addition to the galactic map, discovered by the "eye" of the world's second largest telescope here, is surprisingly vast clouds of hydrogen in and about the Milky Way. This was reported by Dr. Otto Struve, director of the new observatory.

Hydrogen, he said, makes up nearly the entire mass of this interstellar gas. Some of this hydrogen is glowing. Its light is not due to heat, but to the ultraviolet rays given off by extremely hot stars in the vicinity of some of the hydrogen clouds.

Reach Millions of Miles.

These ultraviolet beams are true "death rays." They reach out for about 300 light years, which is the distance light will travel in 300 years. That is their effective distance within which they can cause detectible disturbances in hydrogen and other gases in space.

Evidence of the continent of stars near the earth was reported by Dr. Bart J. Bok of Harvard observatory. The "continent" means that in our own region of the milky way, the area within something like 10 million light years, stars are much more numerous than in other areas.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: All for One

Middleboro, Mass., May 8.—[Special.] — Frank Carlos Griffiths, 87 years old, favorite juvenile actor of the old Boston museum 70 years ago and later manager many years for Lillie Langtry and Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, died today at his home.

DR. SCOTT STARTS WORK ON 18 STORY N. U. DORMITORY

Walter Dill Scott, retiring president of Northwestern university, broke ground yesterday for a skyscraper dormitory to be erected on the Chicago campus at Lake Shore drive and Huron street.

The building will be 18 stories tall and will cost $1,700,000. It will house 700 students. It will be the tallest structure in the world to be used exclusively as a university dormitory.

Northwestern's downtown schools have an enrollment of 1,500 men students in the schools of law, medicine, and dentistry alone. Most of them live on the near north side. It is expected the dormitory will relieve housing congestion for many of them.

PARK, SANITARY BOARDS TO JOIN TAX CAMPAIGN

The sanitary and park districts yesterday promised to coöperate with the city in the drive to collect delinquent taxes. Representatives of these governments appeared before the city council committee on taxation to make plans for a series of foreclosure suits against tax dodgers. Ald. Frank Keenan [49th], chairman of the committee, appointed a subcommittee to consider new legislation to further the collections.

The committee also took up the question of expenditures by the board of election commissioners exceeding annual appropriations. A subcommittee, it was announced, will make an inquiry including the expenditures of the municipal courts, tuberculosis sanitarium, library and schools. Economies will be sought.

Lamps Fall on Her in Store; Awarded $10,000 Damages

An award of $10,000 damages against the F. W. Woolworth company was made yesterday by a jury before Judge William Wimbiscus of Spring Valley sitting in Circuit court here. Mrs. Giovannina Spampanato, 2317 Taylor street, who won the judgment, charged that on June 19, 1937, a lamp display fell and struck her on the head as she was purchasing a skein of yarn in one of the company's stores. Since the accident, it was testified, she has had constant headaches and has been unable to perform her work as a housewife.

Ten Killed, 300 Injured in Blast in Tokio Factory

TOKIO, May 9 [Tuesday].—(AP)—Ten persons were known to have been killed today and 300 injured, 100 seriously, in two explosions at a celluloid factory at Komamezawa on the outskirts of Tokio.

ARBITERS TO FIX DATE TODAY FOR WIEBOLDT VOTE

The date for an election to determine whether the 74 truck drivers and helpers employed by the Wieboldt Stores, Inc., shall have the trucking unions or their own labor organization as bargaining agent is to be decided upon today, Mayor Kelly's three man arbitration board chosen to settle the labor dispute between the stores and the unions is to meet this afternoon to fix the day.

Last evening Federal Judge Otto Kerner, chairman of the three man board, finished interviewing the store's truckers. He asked each man whether the unions had used force or threats in seeking his membership and also questioned the men to see whether they desired an immediate election or wanted to delay the poll for a time. His findings will be reported to the rest of the committee this afternoon and the date will depend upon what he divulges.

Police still were hunting yesterday for the slayer of James Lawrence, Wieboldt truck helper who was shot by terrorists on April 12. Rewards totaling $6,000 offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer have not been claimed.

THE FRB INDEX.

Investor's Guide: I know that there are several recognized stock market indices, such as the Dow-Jones averages, but am not familiar with an inclusive index that measures actual business activity. A banker told me today, however, that an index has been compiled by the federal reserve board and is commonly used in gauging business. Can you tell me what this index is and what lines of business are included? Is automobile production an important factor?

—M. H.

Answer: There are a number of indices that are used by business men, brokers, and economists to gauge business. The federal reserve board's monthly index of industrial production, commonly called the "FRB," is probably the most commonly used. It was devised in 1927.

Whether the index goes up or down from month to month depends on the volume of goods produced. The computation is made from output in twelve groups of manufacturing industries and eight mining groups. The manufacturers account for 85.7 per cent and the minerals for 14.3 per cent of the total index.

	Per cent.
Steel ingot production	17.88
Mill consumption of raw cotton	8.67
Lumber output	8.25
Automobile and truck production	5.38
Crude petroleum deliveries	4.98
Hogs slaughtered	3.18
Newsprint consumption	2.33
Boot and shoe output	1.77
Pneumatic tire production	1.65

In preparing the index the board made the base period 1923-'25. This period is taken as 100. The FRB made its highest yearly mark in 1929 at 119 and hit its lowest point of 64 in 1932.

This index has what is called a "downward bias" because it includes many industries which have either matured or begun to decline, and because it does not include a number of industries which have been expanding their output greatly in the last ten years or so. Among the lines excluded from the FRB are aircraft, radio, rayon, and chemicals [except as reflected in by-products of petroleum and coke].

COAL CONFEREES AND ROOSEVELT TO MEET TODAY

His Bid Accepted by Both Sides.

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Negotiators for Appalachian coal operators and C. I. O. union miners will meet President Roosevelt in the White House at noon tomorrow in an effort to settle their two month dispute over a new labor contract and reopen the mines of the twenty-six state bituminous area.

The invitation was extended tonight by Secretary of Labor Perkins. She acted soon after John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers and of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, made public a letter to Dr. John R. Steelman, labor department conciliator, blaming the Roosevelt administration—specifically her own department—for the long shutdown.

At the same time she announced the negotiators' acceptance of the White House invitation, the secretary struck out at the operators.

Charges Violation of Ethics.

She asserted that in refusing to continue operations, pending negitiations, under the old contract, which expired March 31, they had been guilty of a "violation of the principle, of the ethics, of collective bargaining."

"Among the things which are generally accepted," she said, "is that every effort should be made to continue operations" during negotiations.

Miss Perkins emphasized that the President's rôle would be that of "a mediator." She will sit in, and it was understood she would confer beforehand with Mr. Roosevelt.

Lewis had charged earlier in a letter to Dr. Steelman that the administration's attitude had encouraged the operators to try to "disembowel" the mine workers' union.

Union Not Backed, He Says.

"Failure of the Roosevelt administration to approve or sustain the mine workers' offers to keep the industry in operation caused many coal operators to believe that they had carte blanche to disembowel the mine workers union if they could," Lewis wrote.

"Contrary to published reports, the mine workers do not demand the so-called "closed shop," with restrictions upon employment and managerial policies. The mine workers ask acceptance of the 'union shop,' legalized by an act of the federal congress, or alternatively they offer the elimination of the automatic penalty clause so obnoxious to any thoughtful citizen."

[He referred to a contract clause which provides daily fines of $1 to $2 against miners participating in unauthorized strikes and also fines operators who declare a lockout.]

Mediators Are Present.

He emerged from the afternoon session of the conference only long enough to give out a copy of the letter, dated yesterday and then returned to the meeting. A few minutes later Secretary Perkins entered the conference room where Dr. Steelman and James F. Dewey, a department aid, were in session with the miners and operators.

When Miss Perkins later announced the conference set for tomorrow she did not comment directly on Lewis' letter. She said, however, that if an agreement were not reached quickly to reopen the closed mines, the government would be forced to take "a practical course to get the coal moving."

A reference was made to the suspended Roosevelt inspired peace conferences of the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor when Miss Perkins was asked whether the rivalry between those two organizations was a factor in the coal deadlock.

Calls It Vital Factor.

"It is a vital factor," she replied, "though not the sole factor."

The U. M. W. has contended in the coal negotiations that it needed contract clauses that would protect it from rivals, presumably the A. F. of L.'s Progressive Mine Workers of America.

In a résumé of the negotiations, which she said she had given the deadlocked conferees, Miss Perkins indicated that the two principal bars to the signing of a contract still stood: The union's demand for either [1] a "union shop" or [2] elimination of strike penalty clauses.

Miss Perkins said no conclusions on the two issues were reached at

SALES OF GEN. MOTORS LOWER DURING APRIL, BUT EXCEED YEAR AGO

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—Sales of automobiles and trucks to consumers in the United States in April by the General Motors corporation were 132,612 units. This was 29,078 units more than sales for the same month of 1938, but 9,450 less than in March, 1939.

Sales to dealers in the United States in April were 126,275 units, against 142,743 in March and 78,525 in April, 1938. Total sales to dealers in the United States and Canada, plus overseas shipments, were 158,969 units in April, against 182,652 in March, and 109,659 in April, 1938.

For the first four months sales to consumers in the United States were 446,790 automobiles and trucks, an increase of 117,334 units as compared with the same period of 1938.

Sales to dealers in the United States during the first four months were 501,872 units, against 275,376 a year ago.

INDUSTRY HURT BY SMOKE LAW, CHICAGO IS TOLD

Members of the Chicago Mill Supply association yesterday told what they believe is needed to make a "Greater Chicago." They spoke at a business clinic held at the Bismarck hotel under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce. One speaker said too rigid enforcement of the smoke ordinance is driving industry out of the city and another criticized the lending policy of banks.

"Adequate financing cannot be obtained in Chicago for industrial development," James A. Delaney, president of the McMaster-Carr Supply company, said. He said local banking institutions and national insurance companies withhold loans on property adjoining "blighted" areas.

Carl A. Channon, vice president of the Great Lakes Supply company, said anti-smoke and anti-dust ordinance enforcement is driving industry from Chicago and deterring industry from locating here. "Industry wants smoke," he said. "When there is no smoke from the chimneys of factories the workers don't eat. If Chicago wants industry it must expect dust and smoke. It cannot be altogether a city beautiful."

AGREEMENT NEAR ON MEXICAN OIL, RICHBERG SAYS

Washington, D. C., May 8.—(AP)—Donald R. Richberg, attorney representing American oil companies, said today an agreement with Mexico over expropriated oil properties was "within reach."

Richberg made the statement prior to a conference with Secretary of State Hull. He had just returned from a three day conference in Mexico with President Cardenas and Mexican ambassador, Francisco Najera.

Spend More, Says Hopkins; Flails Critics

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, who achieved fame as the nation's greatest spender while WPA administrator, today advocated continued government spending and disowned the phrase "business appeasement."

Secretary Hopkins.

Hopkins, returning to his desk for the first time in ten weeks after recuperating from influenza, also attacked the "gloomy" resolution for drastic revision in administration policy adopted last week by the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

He said he believed government spending should continue for a time but said it must be supplemented by increasing private expenditures.

Urges Use of Private Funds.

"I think it important that for the next twelve months, at least, the fiscal program of the government should be carried out," he said. "I think, however, that we should stimulate the use of private funds. Government funds won't do the whole trick."

Concerning "business appeasement," with which he was connected as one of the administration sponsors, Hopkins said:

"That language was created by our opponents—deliberately created. Certainly the administration wants to see and has great confidence that this private economic system can work. I simply can't understand the state of mind of people, considering all the great wealth and resources we have, who take a defeated attitude."

Roosevelt's Approval Seen.

His remarks were believed to have the President's approval inasmuch as he and Associate Justice William O. Douglas had cruised overnight with Mr. Roosevelt on the Potomac river, where the business situation was the main topic of conversation.

When asked what he thought of the chamber of commerce resolutions, which called for repeal of the wage-hour law, amendment of the Wagner act, liberalization of tax laws, a curb on spending and other modifications in policy, Hopkins snapped: "Not much!"

"They certainly spread a lot of gloom around town," he continued. "Maybe that's what encouraged me to get well faster. To read them, it would seem apparently some of them don't believe in this economic system. They certainly sounded pessimistic and none of this pessimism is waranted on the basis of indications of business improvement on a good many fronts."

This reaction of Hopkins to the chamber's meeting was expected in view of administration withdrawal from the sessions. Hopkins was expected to address the meeting, but excused himself, saying his health had not permitted it.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE PICKS NEW GOVERNORS; BARTLETT CHAIRMAN

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Members of the New York Stock exchange replaced seven of their governors today in a noncontroversial annual election. A total of 669 ballots was cast out of an exchange membership of 1,375.

The new governors are expected to continue the liberal policy begun with the election battle of two years ago which resulted, last year, in the employment of William Martin Jr. as president and the election of Edward E. Bartlett Jr. as chairman of the board of governors.

Bartlett was reëlected today. Martin continues as president indefinitely "at the pleasure of the board.

The new governors, all brokers, are: R. J. Hamershlag, George E. Kantzler, Harry H. Moore, John Rutherford and J. G. Remick, all of New York houses, and W. W. Lanahan of Baltimore and M. W. Greenough of Boston.

2 FIRMS' PROFITS ARE TERMED HIGH AT GAS RATE QUIZ

Hearings were begun in Chicago yesterday to determine whether rates on natural gas originating in Texas and consumed in Chicago are unreasonable.

Frank Durrance, federal power commision examiner, took testimony on rates and profits of the Natural Gas Pipeline Company of America and the Texoma Natural Gas company. The companies bring Texas natural gas to Joliet, where it is sold to the Chicago District Pipeline company and, in turn, to the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company.

The hearing is on a complaint of the Illinois commerce commission and a citation of the federal power commission. Harry R. Booth, counsel for the Illinois commission, asked the federal agency to fix "reasonable" rates on the Texas gas, asserting that would enable the Illinois commission to establish "fair" rates for Chicago.

Booth charged the Texas companies' profit was "tremendous." He said they paid 100 per cent dividends in 1936 and 1937.

COURT GIVES SEC RIGHT TO PROBE NATIONAL BANKS

Decision Is Made in Transamerica Case.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—The right of the Securities and Exchange commission to investigate national banks was upheld by the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals today in ruling on an appeal by the Bank of America.

The bank is the largest banking affiliate of Transamerica corporation, big California holding company of A. P. Giannini, former administration supporter. It had opposed the attempts of the SEC to subpena records and reports of the bank in connection with its proceedings against Transamerica and subsidiaries on charges of filing false and misleading financial statements with the commission.

The court held that, although the commission has the right to investigate national banks, such data as it obtains must be held confidential.

Suggests Transferring Inquiry.

The court of appeals also suggested that the commission transfer its inquiry to San Francisco, pointing out that mechanical difficulties of transferring voluminous Bank of America records east for the investigation would, "for all practical purposes, close the bank."

Hearings on the SEC action against Transamerica have been suspended pending further investigation by commission officials of subsidiary records which Transamerica voluntarily offered the commission for inspection after the Bank of America injunction suit was filed. The same offer was later given on the bank's records, but the commission refused it, preferring a court decision on its right to investigate national banks which are connected with companies registered with the commission.

Seeks Ten Years' Records.

The SEC subpenas sought to obtain Bank of America records extending back almost ten years. Pointing out that these original subpenas have now expired, the court of appeals said the bank's original request for an injunction will remain at the trial docket of the District court, with the right of the bank to apply for additional relief.

Concerning the matter of publicizing the bank's reports, the court said: "The securities exchange act authorized the commission in its discretion to make investigations and to make public its findings, but there is nothing in the act which authorizes publicity in advance of hearing."

In instances where bank reports are obtained from confidential sources neither the purpose nor intent of the act contemplates their broadcast to the public, the court held.

"It is not difficult to see that such a power might easily be made an instrument of oppression and, lacking specific congressional authorization, we think it ought not to be indulged," it said.

Giannini Asks Hearing.

San Mateo, Cal., May 8.—(AP)—L. M. Giannini, president of Bank of America National Trust and Savings association, today said he had wired members of congress and asked that a hearing be held on the pending bill to abolish the office of controler of the currency.

"We will be happy to supply hitherto unpublished startling information," the telegram said. Addressed to Senator Robert Wagner [D., N. Y.] and Representative Henry B. Steagall [D., Ala.], it referred to charges brought by the Securities and Exchange commission against Bank of America, and continued:

"The unwaranted, unjust, and biased action of one governmental agency in harrassing a national bank responsible to the controler of the currency . . . and other governmental regulatory bodies induces us to make this request of you."

Steel Output to Decline to 47 Per Cent Capacity

Steel operations for the week beginning May 8 are scheduled at 47 per cent of ingot capacity against 47.8 per cent in the preceding week, the American Iron and Steel Institute announced yesterday.

Launch Chicago Building Campaign

Slum Clearing Plan Urged as Building Aid

Passage of legislation permitting the creation of "public service building corporations" offers the most effective means of eradicating Chicago's depreciated areas and stimulating the construction industry, a city council subcommittee was told yesterday.

J. Soule Warterfield, former president of the Chicago real estate board, asserted enactment of legislation now pending in Springfield would lead to the return of thousands of properties to a self-sustaining, tax paying basis, and permit the reëmployment of jobless building trades mechanics.

He declared that much of the opposition to the proposed laws, as voiced previously, was motivated largely by real estate interests "who would like nothing better than an opportunity to boost rents."

Cites Competitive Factor.

New, modern building, he told a subcommittee headed by Ald. Roger J. Kiley [37th], would compete with existing properties.

"Many property owners are entitled to a larger return on their investment, but are taking a stand that is short sighted," Warterfield said. "Rents are not only governed by supply and demand but also by the ability to pay. We must have a return of employment in the building industry, which is the largest single employer of labor, before we can increase the public's ability to pay.

City's Leaders Urge All to Co-operate.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Chicago opened a campaign yesterday to revive its dormant building industry. City leaders at a crowded meeting in the city council chambers opened "Building Industry Week" by telling what it will take to start the sounds of steam shovels and saws and hammers throughout the city.

Most important, speakers asserted, are a return of private capital and private initiative to the building field. Then all groups—city government, contractors, and labor—must coöperate to get the building industry off a dead center. The building week is sponsored by the Chicago Building congress, whose members consist of architects, contractors, real estate men, labor leaders, and others associated with the building industry.

Calls for All-City Team.

Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9th], chairman of the city council committee on housing, and Patrick F. Sullivan, president of the Chicago Building Trades council, were among speakers who emphasized the need for private enterprise.

"Banker, broker, architect, builder, and craftsman are called upon to team up for the biggest job Chicago has ever tackled," said Lindell. "'Buy, Build and Modernize Now' is the slogan to be presented to the public.

"One-third of Chicago is vacant. Thirty or forty square miles of the old Chicago can be rebuilt into a new Chicago. Nearly forty square miles of our city are over crowded. A shortage of nearly 30,000 homes a year is said to be created by the formation of new families.

"At no time since the great fire has the need for concerted action been more urgent. The revitalization of civic resources is necessary. The salvaging of property and the reduc-

It will be sent with a list of selected corporation issues of investment character, yielding an average of about 5%. Ask for booklet CT-75.

A major factor in a sound bond market is the great body of individual investors who buy bonds only occasionally—when they have surplus funds—in as little as $500 or $1,000 amounts. Yet these smaller and more numerous investors are not getting the service they once did—when new issues were plentiful and market volume supported widespread sales solicitation.

For such investors, who indicate their interest, we have set up special facilities to provide adequate service. Our booklet, "'Going to Market' for Bonds," tells how the investor, regardless of location or size of funds, can keep informed—get offerings suited to his needs—make leisurely decisions—handle all details by mail or in person—at his own convenience.

When Chicago staged its

FIRST WORLD'S FAIR

IN 1893, Chicago for the first time formally played host to the peoples of the world. The young city had accomplished in three generations the work of centuries and was celebrating in a fitting manner. At the World's Columbian Exposition, the colorful exhibits of forty-six nations testified to the growing international importance of the Midwest metropolis.

Even then The Northern Trust Company was a familiar part of the Chicago scene. The young banking house had flourished—had already assumed an important place in the financial life of the city.

Decades have passed. Another Chicago World's Fair has sent its happy millions home. The city has prospered and become the sixth largest in the world. At The Northern Trust Company, facilities have been expanded again and again to keep step with this growth. Yet The Northern Trust Company of today is unchanged from that of 1893 in two fundamental respects. Friendliness and the adherence to sound banking principles are still the foundation stones of its policy.

New York, May 8.—Stocks closed irregularly lower today after holding to a narrow price range throughout the session. Most of the changes were fractional. Turnover continued small, only 349,630 shares.

Absence of buying interest rather than any particular pressure was held chiefly responsible for the downward tendency. Professionals showed slight interest. Wariness on the part of traders was attributed in part to the announcement of the German-Italian military alliance and the prolongation of the soft coal deadlock.

The list opened irregular, firmed for a brief spell, then gave way. Some improvement developed in the afternoon, but it was indecisive.

Many representative industrial issues closed unchanged to lower. Among them were United States Steel, Republic Steel, United States Rubber, Youngstown, Standard Oil of New Jersey, General Electric, and Goodrich.

New York Bonds.

New York, May 8.—(AP)—United States treasury bonds rose as much as 18-32ds point today while the rest of the bond market remained static. Averages on railroad, low yield, industrial, and foreign bonds closed unchanged. A few utilities recorded minor advances.

Advances of small fractions were recorded for Anaconda Copper 4½s, Bethlehem Steel 3½s, Southern Pacific 4½s of '68, and Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5s of '62. Declines of similar extent were registered for Shell Union 3½s, Western Union 5s of '60, Frisco 4½s of '78, Armour of Delaware 4s of '55, and International Hydro Electric 6s.

Chicago Stocks.

Chicago stocks were irregular in quiet trading yesterday. Among the more active issues, Hupp Motor and Horder's were the only ones able to show improvement, and their advances were confined to fractions.

More prominent stocks showing fractional declines included Armour, Bendix, Borg-Warner, Butler Brothers, Zenith, Standard Oil, Walgreen, and Commonwealth Edison.

Bank Stocks.

WHO'S VILLAIN IN MELODRAMA OF GRAIN PIT?

Both Sides Want Hero Role in Corn Serial.

That melodrama of the grain pits—Cargill, Inc., vs. the Chicago Board of Trade—is still on the boards. Autumn has turned into winter, winter has become spring, summer is not far away—but the villain still pursues the heroine and the hero yet waits for the moment of climactic rescue.

S. Abbott Maginnis is referee.

This melodrama appears to roll on forever. It is a serial presentation. It is played five times a week, for an average of five hours a day, and its setting is sometimes Washington, sometimes Chicago.

In the course of the play's run, innumerable characters have appeared and then disappeared from the stage. But the underlying theme never alters. It is that the Board of Trade, in ordering Cargill to sell its corn in the autumn of 1937, manipulated the grain markets against the farmers.

Farmer Is the Pursued.

This is the charge brought by Cargill, which places that Minneapolis grain firm in the rôle of hero, the Board in the rôle of villain and the farmer as the pursued. There is, however, some confusion about these rôles. The secretary of agriculture has filed a complaint charging it was Cargill which manipulated prices, making the firm the villain and the Board the hero. The farmer remains the pursued.

Cargill, its officers, and its subsidiary companies held a large amount of September contract corn in the autumn of 1937. The board of trade's business conduct committee, declaring it feared that Cargill was "cornering" the market, ordered the firm to sell 1,000,000 bushels of September corn. Cargill refused. The present controversy develops from that incident.

The curtain rose in February, 1938, when Cargill first filed its complaint. A motion by the board to strike out the complaint was denied, and hearings got under way in Washington on Nov. 26, 1938

The Admission Is Free.

The scene was soon shifted to Chicago, where it is now located in parlor L of the Hotel Sherman. Admission is free—for all who can stand it.

It is, so far as it has progressed, the hero's play. It is the hero [Cargill, Inc.] who has done all the talking, all the chest thumping. The villain [the Board of Trade] has not yet been given a chance. In fact, the villain doesn't want a chance. When the hero has finished his argument, the villain intends to ask that the whole subject be dismissed and forgotten.

The hero's protestations total 10,394 pages of type written evidence, and there is no end yet in sight. On the basis of about 200 words to a page, the evidence already submitted exceeds two million spoken words. Most of them have been spoken by the hero and his compatriots. He has introduced 200 exhibits into the evidence.

There's a Referee.

All of this goes on before a comparatively small audience, composed of attorneys, stenographers, and the referee. The public is present only when some stray looking for the barber shop wanders in—and hastily gets out. It is that kind of play. The referee, who assumes the position of public morality at the show, is S. Abbott Maginnis, of the department of justice.

Some of the questions which have arisen have left even the participants groggy. One question amounted to 38 typewritten pages. It contained 203 hypotheses. It was during the presentation of this that public morality, in the person of Maginnis, got a headache and the session had to be adjourned early.

The play has imposed a new mode of life on its major participants. Two attorneys of the board, Howard Ellis and William H. Symmes, have appeared at every hearing. The Cargill case has practically become their life.

Attorneys for Cargill do not have quite such a record. Presentation of Cargill's side is under the direction of Irving Goldsmith, with Frank Fowle as his assistant. Neither has been present at every session. All told, about seven or eight lawyers have appeared for the hero up to this time.

Public Helps Foot the Bill.

While admission is free, the show cannot go on without money. Everybody pays. The public, the board, and Cargill all put out the cash. What this sum will eventually total is unknown, but members of the Board of Trade, who have not been having too cheery a financial time of it in recent years, are inclined to view the possibilities with dismay.

The next chapter of the serial is scheduled for today. Maginnis has returned from Washington, where he was asking some questions about procedure, and is ready for today's presentation. It seems likely that, come summer, that good old melodrama of hero, villain, and pursued will be keeping 'em away from parlor "L" at the Hotel Sherman.

Employment on Railroads Rises to 950,130 in April

Washington, D. C., May 8.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission reported today the number of employés of class one railroads in mid-April was 950,130, an increase of 4.03 per cent compared with the corresponding period in 1938 and an increase of 0.24 per cent over the total at mid-March, 1939. The largest employment increase was in the maintenance of way and structures group.

Discussing the administration's direct entrance into the controversy, the secretary said its decision had been made after the emergence of certain "new factors." These, she said, included the fact that "the union shop has been discussed more vigorously than before."

Recapitulating her information about the negotiations, Miss Perkins said the miners "remind me that they have given way on twenty-seven" of their original demands. [This apparently was a reference to a similar statement made by Lewis in his letter to Steelman. Miss Perkins said, however, that she had not come here because of the Lewis statement, and had not seen it when she left Washington.]

Discusses "Union Shop."

Concerning the chief obstacle to an agreement, which she said is the union shop, Miss Perkins declared that neither side had attempted a really definite description of the term, but, she added:

"It has been stated by the U. M. W. that in connection with the union shop they would not propose to weaken the managerial clauses of the present [old] contract, but would be willing to repeat them."

After Miss Perkins recited her views, Lewis said: "There's only one kind of contract that will protect the U. M. W.—the union shop. The closed shop is not a question here."

When Lewis remarked that the mine workers, in demanding a union shop, would waive the right to organize 12 per cent of all mine employés [excluding certain office, clerical, and technical workers], Charles O'Neill of New York, one of the four operator negotiators, retorted:

"Mr. Lewis magnanimously agrees to permit us to keep our staffs."

A hint of dissension among the four operators negotiating with the mine workers was given when Philip Murray, U. M. W. vice president, declared that two of the operators had agreed that the union contract terms "would be better for the operators than their own terms."

URGES TROOPS BE CALLED

Frankfort, Ky., May 8.—[Special.]—State Attorney General Hubert Meredith urged today that the National Guard be stationed along the Kentucky-Tennessee line to prevent a recurrence of an invasion of the eastern Kentucky coal mine area by a mob of 400 C. I. O. miners who last week beat two sheriff's deputies.

"If I were governor I would send a bunch of soldiers to the state line and when the Tennessee mob invaded this state I would have them shot down," Meredith wrote to T. E. Mahan, counsel for Mrs. Eliza Ellison, sheriff of Whitley county, where the attack occurred.

"If I had the power to command the militia and the state police, I would stop these acts of violence now."

Illinois Shaft Picketed.

Pekin, Ill., May 8.—(AP)—The United Mine Workers of America formed a picket line at the Pekin Mining company shaft near here today after the firm announced it would resume operations tomorrow under a new contract with the Progressive Mine Workers union [A. F. of L.]. The mine employed 150 U. M. W. members prior to the state-wide walkout last Thursday midnight.

CHICAGO OPENS DRIVE TO REVIVE BUILDING WORK

Mayor Asks Co-operation in Industry's Program.

tion of taxes are imperative. A stimulation of business is demanded. Reëmployment of Chicago's army of building tradesmen is needed to ensure economic recovery."

Lindell said that the new building code, less than six months old, already has proved a stimulant to the building industry and should exert a greater beneficial influence in the future.

Sullivan said that the government has made some work, but that private capital alone will bring back the building industry.

Robert Knight, deputy building commissioner, read a statement by Mayor Kelly urging all sections of the city to coöperate in undertaking new building and in modernizing existing structures.

Mayor Cites Need.

"Local government has been responsive to the need for a more durable integration of our city in transportation facilities, housing, public works, commercial expansion, and moral security," Kelly's statement said.

"Any impetus given to building or remodeling our industrial, business, and residential districts should not produce an artificial boom.

"There are many problems confronting us that will require unity of minds as well as coöperative hands. The demolition of unsafe buildings, the reclamation of neglected districts, the adjustment of tax delinquincy are some of the economic as well as social imperatives for insuring a well ordered and progressive city.

Adequate Zoning Urged.

"Integrated with the program is the building of more small parks and neighborhood play spots—more community health centers and more safeguards against accidents on streets. Adequate zoning and modern city planning and the creation of more attractive investments for private building capital also are needed."

Mayor Kelly said that the attraction of new industries and expansion of existing industry cannot be stimulated by any flash propaganda or by one shot hypodermics.

"We know that one building does not make a community," he continued. "No single new structure can arrest a neighborhood that is running down. It must be a type of community planning that develops every factor of public and private ownership in the neighborhood."

Elmer C. Jensen, president of the Chicago Building congress, said that approximately 3,000 persons will attend a congress banquet tonight in the Stevens hotel.

Among speakers will be Charles D. Maginnins of Boston, president of the American Institute of Architects; Willard T. Chevalier of New York, editor and publisher of Business Week; and Dr. Franklin Bliss Snyder, president-elect of Northwestern university.

SLUM CLEARING PLAN BACKED AS AID TO BUILDING

protected under this legislation," he said.

Warterfield is vice president of the Chicago Building Congress, Inc., which is sponsoring the measures introduced recently.

State Would Have Jurisdiction.

"Jurisdiction over operations of public service building corporations' permitted under the act would be held by the Illinois housing board, whose members can be depended upon to give impartial, nonpolitical decisions," he explained. "Chicago's interests are completely protected by the plan commission and the city's housing authorities."

Warterfield strongly advised against amendments to the bills which would place a limit on earnings of corporations which undertake construction. He pointed out that "not a single project" has been undertaken under the "limited dividend" corporation bill passed in Illinois more than five years ago. He opposed suggestions made by previous speakers that provision be made for persons dispossessed from existing buildings when new ones are constructed, pointing out that not even the present national administration at Washington has taken any steps in this direction in its own housing projects.

Board Members Heard.

Warterfield spoke at an afternoon session of the council subcommittee. Speakers during the morning included Oscar W. Rosenthal, chairman of the Illinois housing board; Aubrey C. Williams, board secretary; Robert R. Taylor, director of the Chicago Housing authority, and Fred Kramer, a mortgage banker.

The subcommittee hearing was on a resolution introduced last week urging delay before the council expresses the city's official attitude toward the legislation. The hearing is expected to continue for several days.

PENNEY SALES GAIN.

J. C. Penney company, operators of a national chain of variety stores, reported April sales of $21,281,403, an increase of 4.45 per cent over $20,375,592 in April of last year. Sales in the first four months of 1939 were 7.61 per cent ahead of 1938.

"How I Got a Loan of $100 without embarrassment or delay."

"I needed $100 in a hurry. I dreaded to ask friends for a favor. And I had no security for getting a loan at a bank. What was I to do? Fortunately I heard about Household Finance and so went to a nearby office. The manager was courteous and friendly. He merely asked me a few simple questions. The next day I got the money, with 20 months to repay. Only my wife and I signed the papers. I was delighted to get a loan so simply and promptly."

Whether you are married or single, if you need a loan of $20 to $300 the manager of the Household office near you will be glad to discuss your problem with you in complete privacy and without obligation. Why not phone or visit him today?

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins with John L. Lewis, leader of C. I. O. and United Mine Workers of America, in New York last night. Madame Perkins announced that conferees in coal strike would meet with President Roosevelt today.

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]
